Army Hopes To Retain Some Selects Beyond Year

Military Force Of 1,800,000 Men Would Be Created, A Gain of 100,000

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, said yesterday that the War Department may ask authority to retain some selectees beyond their year of military service.

Unless the military situation affecting the United States becomes very acute, however, he said, the Army wants to send the bulk of the trainees back home when they complete 12 months in uniform.

This stand contrasts with the Army's plans for the National Guard and Reserve officers. Secretary of War Stimson announced Saturday that he had recommended that President Roosevelt ask Congress to extend the service of the Guard and Reserves beyond the present authorized year of training.

Army of 1,800,000

If such action is taken, Marshall said, the War Department will ask funds for an Army about 100,000 men larger than the present projected force, to fill in deficiencies. This would give the Nation an Army of about 1,800,000 officers and men.

"We want the selectees to continue to come in annual increments," the chief of staff said. "We want to keep them flowing into the camps and then back home again. When we send a man home, we will make room for another.

"It may be necessary, however, to keep some trainees in service and release others, depending on where they are and the unit in which serving."

Marshall explained that if a selectee were serving near Chicago, for example, he could be sent home without difficulty. Were he stationed in the Aleutian Islands off Alaska, on the other hand, he said, it might be necessary to hold him two or three months longer in service.

Legislation Necessary

Legislation will be necessary, he said, to keep in any trainees beyond their year of service. The Army chief, moreover, stressed that plans for sending men home are dependent upon the world situation.

Gen. Marshall also disclosed that the War Department has just completed a "very drastic" selective process among majors and lieutenant colonels to choose officers for temporary advancement to colonel. A list of about 200 officers selected for such "jump" promotions will be announced shortly, with more to follow in the fall and winter.

He declared that the department's efforts to get younger officers in troop command had proved successful. Older officers are being placed in noncombatant posts, where their experience is valuable.

Of some 360 permanent colonels aged 56 to 64, Marshall said, only

16 Cents a Quart Likely if Producers Are Granted Increase

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

That milk will go up not 1 but 2 cents a quart for District consumers if producers are granted their demanded 1-cent increase was indicated yesterday.

Likelihood of a boost to 16 cents a quart for home-delivered milk was hinted by John F. Hillyard, of Wakefield Dairy, appearing at the public hearing on proposed amendments to the Washington milk marketing order.

Hillyard's thinly veiled prediction came in the form of a question which he put to Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which is asking an increase of 4 cents per gallon in the price paid dairy farmers for class 1 milk.

Citing the new labor contract signed yesterday with milk drivers and plant workers, the Wakefield representative asked if the distributors' mounting costs did not entitle them to an increase in the retail price if the producers won their fight for a raise.

For nearly three hours yesterday, Derrick read from a prepared statement purporting to justify the cent-a-quart rise in class 1 milk, including that comparatively small portion which is sold to relief families at 5 cents a bottle, made possible by Federal subsidy.

Shortage of farm labor, dry weather, increased feed and machinery costs, rocketing demand due to the population increase, price rises granted in other areas—these were the chief arguments advanced by Derrick.

Of the relief milk program, he said the dairy farmers are entitled to a penny increase in this category because the price they are now getting is too low, in comparison with the rate schedule for the same quality milk retailed at regular market prices.

At present, the producers—under the Federal marketing order—receive $3.17 a hundredweight for

Unions Answered

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

In an effort to break the seven-week strike of 1,700 union machinists, crippling work on $500,000,000 of naval construction along San Francisco Bay, the Navy yesterday ordered civil service rolls opened to machinists who wish jobs in the 11 shipyards affected.

The action followed a point-blank refusal of the two striking locals, one A. F. of L. and one C. I. O., to accept a Navy Department back-to-work proposal.

Meantime, however, a sudden change in the situation appeared likely on the announcement last night that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, the largest of the 11 yards, had agreed to sign a "master contract" providing for a closed shop.

Greenslade's Statement

Although the machinists had struck for wages in excess of those provided by the master contract, the closed shop in the Bethlehem case has been considered the crux of the dispute, and Bethlehem's acceptance of the contract was generally regarded as a necessary first step to the ending of the strike.

The Bethlehem company's action was in accordance with recommendations made public last week by the National Defense Mediation Board, to which the Bethlehem phase of the San Francisco shipyards strike had been referred.

The Navy orders to open civil service rolls to job-seeking machinists followed a conference yesterday called by Rear Admiral J. W. Greenslade, Twelfth Naval District commandant, and including city officials, police, representatives of the Bethlehem Co. and other employers.

After hearing the Navy's back-to-work proposal, terms of which were not disclosed, E. F. Dillon and Harry Hook, business agents for the A. F. of L. local, and James Smith, who holds the same office for the striking C. I. O. local, joined in a statement rejecting the recommendations.

To Relax Work or Fight Rule

"On account of the nature of the request of naval officers," the declaration read, "which we know to be totally unsatisfactory to our membership, we regret we are unable to comply with the requests made of us."

Admiral Greenslade thereupon announced:

"The civil service roles will immediately be opened for employment of all machinists and machinists' helpers who desire to return to work in the shipbuilding industry under the national defense program.

"This employment in civil service status will be continued until such time as a satisfactory and enduring solution of the present difficulties can be arrived at and normal labor relations renewed in the industry."

It was reported that national officers of the A. F. of L. machinists,

Havoc in Reich Equal to Worst In London, Says U. S. Observer

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), June 24. British bombers blasted railway targets in northern France and pounded the invasion coast with "big stuff" last night and early today in furious continuation of an aerial offensive which indirectly helps the Russians on the distant eastern front.

A "fierce engagement" took place during the sweep, the air ministry said, with 13 German planes being destroyed to two British bombers and one British fighter.

Nazis Lose 20 Planes

Thus, the air ministry said, the Germans lost 20 fighters yesterday and last night to three fighters and two bombers for the British.

Further, it was announced officially, the Nazis have lost 118 fighters in eight successive days against 30 British craft missing during the day-and-night offensive of the air.

Two of Germany's long-range guns on Cap Griz Nez came to life for the first time in weeks and shelled the Strait of Dover for nearly half an hour early today—only to draw to themselves the explosives of the R. A. F.

The German salvos were believed directed at a British convoy in the strait.

Win Air Supremacy

The evening sweep of the R. A. F. carried into the thirteenth night the offensive which an American Army observer declared already had won England "absolute supremacy" in the air over northern Europe.

The observer said he had seen photographic evidence that destruction by the R. A. F. in the Reich had far outstripped damage to London in the German blitz last fall.

Soviet sources expressed "Russia's approval and heartiest thanks for the heavy raids dealt on Germany's industrial sections and the supremacy of the air, which now belongs to Britain."

They added that they were most pleased with Prime Minister Churchill's speech yesterday offering aid to Russia, especially passages in which he "underlined the villany of the Nazi regime" and "pledged the help of the great free British Empire."

Opposition Fades

The American observer said that in the 100-mile arc from Dover swinging across France and the Low Countries there was "no effective opposition by day or night to the Royal Air Force." The specter of invasion, he said, had been

America, Committed to Help, Wonders if Reds Can Hold Out

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Without hesitation, the United States yesterday backed Soviet Russia as the lesser of two evils in its mighty conflict against nazism, invited the Russians to ask for American help—and then settled back to watch cautiously the tide of battle before actually turning over any weapons to the Communist forces.

Official quarters indicated that the United States will make haste very slowly in deciding whether the Soviet government may receive aid under the lend-lease law.

While Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, who made public the Government's attitude toward the Nazi-Soviet conflict, revealed that no request for lend-lease help has been received from Moscow, other officials said that before Russia gets any American help United States officials want answers to these three questions:

1. How long can the Russians hold out?

2. How soon could the United States deliver aid to Russia?

3. Is there any danger that American war materials sent to Russia might be captured by the Germans and turned against the British?

As officials generally took a pessimistic view of the Soviet staying power in a war with German

Uprisings Reported In Latvia, Lithuania; Helsinki Protesting

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, June 23.—Actual or impending revolt in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia and a Finnish army facing Leningrad were declared by anti-Soviet sources today to be threatening Russia along her northwestern frontier.

Reports of revolt in Lithuania and a call for an uprising in Latvia were broadcast by the Lithuanian radio and the German station at Koenigsberg, East Prussia. Latvia was reported under rigid Soviet martial law.

[Well informed Russian quarters in Stockholm admitted the Baltic unrest but indicated the Red army had succeeded in surpressing the rebellion in Esthonia, the United Press reported.]

Finland protested to Russia against bombing of Finnish objectives by Soviet airplanes and received a promise from Soviet Minister Pavel Orlov of explanations from Moscow.

The Finnish army command asserted tonight that a Soviet battery at Pummanki fired yesterday on a Finnish trawler leaving Petsamo Fjord, but that the vessel was not hit.

The communique also stated that on the same day in Mirsilamni, in the Immomajaervi district, Soviet soldiers fired several shots across

Nazis Reported Bombing Reds' Black Sea Fleet

Luftwaffe Is Said To Have Driven Warships From Base

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, June 24.—A stiff battle between units of the Soviet fleet, including light cruisers and destroyers and the German Luftwaffe, was reported to be going on today in the western limits of the Black Sea.

These reports, it may be emphasized, entirely lack confirmation. They originate in the Bulgarian port of Varna and in Istanbul.

According to the reports, the Red surface fleet is accompanied by submarines, presumably as protection against German speedboats. Naval attaches here believe the reports are probably correct and that the Russian flotilla was driven out of Odessa by German bombing attacks and is being pursued by the Luftwaffe.

Nazis Admit Fierce Resistance

It is pointed out it will be necessary for the Germans either to capture or destroy the naval bases at Odessa and put out of action a large portion of the Black Sea fleet before starting expected eventual overseas ventures aimed at the Crimea and Batum.

German and Rumanian naval units have been cruising alonge the Bessarabian and Ukrainian coasts, apparently testing out the Russian coastal defenses and naval dispositions. Soviet coastal artillery has replied to their intermittent shelling efforts.

A tremendous battle is understood to be going on in the region of the northern Bukovina and, although Axis sources here claim Cernauti has been occupied by armored German units, this cannot be confirmed. The Germans here admit the Red

Brest-Litovsk Falls

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), June 24. Soviet troops colliding with the mechanized fury of the German army on a front extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea destroyed 300 Nazi tanks and captured 5,000 German troops, the Red army high command announced early today.

The fall of Brest-Litovsk on the Bug River in former Poland near the German-Russian frontier was acknowledged but the main German offensive was branded a failure by Moscow.

Claim 127 Nazi Planes

A total of 127 German planes was claimed shot down in the first two day of war. Seventy-six were shot down Sunday and 51 yesterday the high command said.

"During the day the enemy strove to develop his offensives along the whole front from the Baltic Sea to the Black Sea, directing his main effort toward Shaulai, Kaunas, Grodno, Volkovisk, Kobrin, Vladimirvolysnk, Ravarusska and Beody, but met with no success," the communique said.

"Our air force carried out successful operations in protecting our troops, airdromes, populated areas and military objectives, against enemy air raids and cooperated in the counterattacks of our land forces," the communique added.

Russian Counterattack

Counterattacking Soviet troops, it said, drove the Germans back across the frontier from the Shaulai (Shavli) "direction" of Lithuania.

The Russians also admitted the fall of the towns of Kolno and Lomzha. These places are northeast of Warsaw and represent an advance of about 10 miles after the Germans crossed the Narew River.

One German column which crossed the Bug River at Kristinopol Sunday and seized Stoyanov 15 miles east of there, yesterday turned southeastward toward Brody, the communique indicated.

Meanwhile thousands of workers throughout the country were reported pledging all the war tools necessary "for the final annihilation of the Fascist aggressors."

Prime Minister Churchill's Sunday speech promising all possible aid to the Soviet Union for the fight against Germany was published prominently and in great detail and put on the radio.

High Command Silent

By C. Brooks Peters.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, June 23.—The marching German legions tonight were reported to be constantly advancing along their routes of invasion into Russia in the "crusade" of national socialism to destroy communism.

The German attack appears to have been so successful in its initial stages that deep inroads have already been made into western territory and devastating blows dealt the Red air force.

[The Germans said they destroyed 1,200 planes in the first day of fighting, a United Press dispatch from Berlin reported.]

Such is the picture which must be drawn from today's high command communique, from statements of the official news agency and reports of German soldier war correspondents flown from the eastern front and published in the press here or broadcast over a national hookup.

Official military quarters maintain the silence usual in the opening stages of German campaigns. Contrary to the communiques published in the first days of any of the previous campaigns in this war, today's official high command statement declares not only that yesterday's operations against Russia were carried out according to plan, but also that they were "successful."

Border Defenses Taken

As usual, however, the high command mentions no geographical names and the single specific designation which has been alluded to here was in a war correspondent's report which colorfully told of the taking of the strong fortified citadel of Brest-Litovsk.

[The heaviest bombardment of the war was said to have opened the way to German assault troops battering at Brest-Litovsk, the United Press reported.

[Propaganda reporters said that after the artillery barrage troops armed with flame throwers rushed in and took those Russian pill boxes not already reduced to rubble by the heavy guns.

Relief Urged For 3,600 WPA Will Drop Here

Direct relief is the "only solution" for maintaining the 3,600 persons who must be cut off the WPA rolls by July 1, Acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning told the Senate Committee on District Appropriations yesterday. He urged an appropriation of $600,000 for that purpose.

The Commissioners today will consider revision of welfare regulations to permit direct relief payments to employable persons without jobs.

Federal authorities, who had ordered the paring of the WPA roster here from 8,000 to 4,000, yesterday agreed to set the new rolls at 4,400.

Chevy Chase Co-Ed Is Missing

Nancy Masters, 19-year-old student, of 19 Williams Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., was missing from her home early today 15 hours after she had left for the Library of Congress.

She was driving a blue-bodied Ford coach, 1937 model, bearing a Maryland license, 316-986. She wore a blue polka dot dress.

She had made an engagement with four girl friends to attend the movies last night, but did not appear for the appointment.

Senate Committee Approves Stone For Chief Justice

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved unanimously yesterday President Roosevelt's nomination of Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone to be Chief Justice of the United States.

Action was delayed on the nomination of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson to succeed Stone as an associate justice because Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, asked to be heard regarding Jackson's qualifications.

Tydings told reporters he was studying "several matters" regarding Jackson's administration of the Justice Department but that he had not yet decided whether he would oppose the nomination.

President Roosevelt's nomination of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to be an associate Justice succeeding former Justice James C. McReynolds already has been confirmed by the Senate.

That Police Probe

House Group to Chart Inquiry Into District Force Today

A House subcommittee today will chart the course of a Congressional investigation of the Metropolitan Police Department, ordered by unanimous vote of the District Committee yesterday.

Meeting in executive session at 10 a. m., the subcommittee will debate suggestions made yesterday that the inquiry be conducted behind closed doors. It also will lay out a schedule for the inquiry, determining what witnesses are to be called, and when, in what promises to be a searching probe of all phases of police practices and of the caliber of officer personnel.

The question of whether the investigation is to be conducted in open or star chamber sessions will be left entirely up to the subcommittee, Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, its chairman, said last night.

Meanwhile, the crime that touched off a blast of Congressional criticism of the Police Department and led to the decision to investigate, remained as far from solution as it was last Monday, when the nude and raped body of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department worker, was found in a Q Street garage.

Nazis Must Crush Russia Before Autumn, Experts Say

Soviet Resources Only Hope of Hitler, Many Officials Here Hold

Germany's invasion of the biggest country in the world is a desperate grab for the sorely needed raw materials that abound in Soviet Russia, in the view of many American officials.

Nazi Europe, say these policy-makers, is not self-sufficient in most of the sinews of war and would not be self-sufficient even if North Africa and the Near East came totally under the swastika.

Only in Russia, these officials say,

Germany must crush the Russian army within three months or bog down in dire difficulties, well-informed sources here declare.

Hoover Airport May Be Made Army Drill Field

The old Washington-Hoover Airport, object of strong language from many a transport pilot and now replaced by "model" National Airport at Gravelly Point, should be turned into an Army drill field, the Senate Appropriations Committee decided yesterday.

In approving a $10,600,000,000 Army bill, the committee included $1,000,000 to cover purchase of the property and the expense of making changes necessary for its adaptation to military uses.

Plans to acquire the airport were first reported in an exclusive story published by The Washington Post.

Tokyo Leaders To Announce Policy Today

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, June 23.—Japan kept the Pacific area guessing today on her course in the Russian-German war but indicated her policy would be announced soon.

"Following the cabinet meeting tomorrow," said a report by the semi-official Domei news agency, "a statement manifesting Japan's firm attitude will be issued.

"The statement will have the double purpose of stressing Japan's unswerving devotion to the cause of establishment of lasting peace in the world and of renewing the Japanese nation's determination to proceed with construction of a new order in East Asia."

A joint meeting of the cabinet and high command was scheduled for today, but postponed indefinitely. Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye conferred with Emperor Hirohito, and talked for 6 hours with Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka who had been in conference with German Ambassador Maj. Gen. Eugen Ott.

(Far Eastern sources at Shanghai thought Japan might try to seize Eastern Sibera. Others believed she might drive for the oil and tin of the Netherlands East Indies.

(A Japanese announcement at Shanghai said the steamer Asama Maru would make an emergency visit to Batavia to take Japanese women and children and German subjects from the Netherlands East Indies.)

The Japanese railway ministry announced suspension of the sale of passenger tickets for Russia or Europe by Vladivostok or Manchuli, Manchukuo. A report from Manchuli itself said the last civilian train would leave for Moscow from Manchuli June 28. Most passengers have been Germans, Japanese and Italians.

Communists Evoke Chuckles In Hewing to New 'Party Line'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Although rooting for the Red army, Washington yesterday chuckled as it watched American Communists again performing mental acrobatics so as to land on the new "party line."

That line, which up until dawn Sunday required the Communists to call President Roosevelt a warmonger, to denounce aid to Britain and to obstruct America's defense program, is summed up now in one sentence:

"Full support and cooperation with the Soviet Union in its struggle against Hitlerism."

The cry for aid to Russia was contained in a manifesto issued Sunday at 9:00 p. m., after Hitler had launched a grudge fight with his erstwhile appeasement friend, Stalin. The manifesto was signed by William Z. Foster, chairman of the Communist Party, in the United States, and Robert Minor, who is acting as secretary in place of Earl Browder, now in jail for lying about a United States passport.

Justifiable Confusion

The Daily Worker ("the paper you can trust"), in spreading the appeal all over page 1, apparently didn't have time to make some of the inside pages conform to the new line. Thus, one article, obviously set in type before Sunday's dawn attack, tells fondly of how British sailors and interned German sailors fraternized in a bar in Santos, Brazil. The article denounces warmongers and deals harshly with the British, now being hailed as Soviet Russia's ally.

Watching the Communists going through their gymnastics, red-baiters on Capitol Hill said that they now would be surprised at nothing—not even at the spectacle of the Communists urging a stay-at-work program and calling for a 12-hour day and a 7-day work week in defense industries.

Welles Quoted

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, the Nation's most famous anti-red, was on his way back from the Texas senatorial campaign, and was expected to issue a statement this morning.

The Texan, chairman of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities, sees the Nazi-Soviet war breaking out just at a time when he felt he had the Communist Party in this country by the throat. He is not likely to favor a reprieve just because the assault on the beloved Soviet Fatherland has changed the "party line."

In this connection, he will be able to cite the statement of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, who, in reminding the country that Hitler's armies are the chief danger to the American, emphasized that Communism is still just as "intolerable" as Nazism.

The Dies Committee, it was learned yesterday, had its own fifth columnist among the pickets who maintained a "peace vigil" in front of the White House for 1,000 hours, and then withdrew just before the Nazi-Soviet war broke out.

The Dies investigator who faithfully carried an anti-war placard, reported that he heard on Thursday that the peace vigil was to be abandoned. He said he was told about this by a man who was marching along in back of him, an orthodox picket representing the Communist-controlled National Maritime Union (C. I. O.).

The Dies Committee had an undercover worker in New York make inquiries at the headquarters of the American Peace Mobilization, which staged the peace vigil. This investigator, it was said at the Capitol yesterday, reported that the A. P. M. bosses were preparing to "liquidate" the organization.

Mrs. Sarah V. Montgomery, secretary of the Washington Peace Mobilization, said yesterday she had every intention of continuing her headquarters at 1653 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, across from the State Department.

"Simply a Coincidence"

Mrs. Montgomery laughed yesterday when asked how it was that the White House pickets retired just before Hitler swung on Stalin.

"It makes me laugh," she said, "that I should be expected to know what is happening all over the world. The whole thing was simply a coincidence."

She was asked if she still opposed aid to Britain.

"Yes," she said. "I have always thought that was one of the steps leading the United States to a shooting war."

"Would you also oppose aid to Russia?"

"Well, I don't want to say anything about that until President Roosevelt takes a stand."

Nobody in authority has ever publicly accused Mrs. Montgomery of being a Communist. There have been suggetions that she was being "used" by the Communists, but these she scornfully rejects, saying she is perfectly able to take care of herself.

When Mrs. Montgomery went before the Dies Committee, the A. P. M. assigned Edward Lamb, of Toledo, as her counsel. Later Lamb appeared as counsel for Alex Balint, C. I. O. leader in the Aluminum Co. strike, who was exposed as an alien and a former convict. Balint denied that he was a Communist, but three witnesses, one of them a former Communist, said he was a party member.

U. S. May Aid Russia as 'Lesser Evil'

mechanized might, it appeared that the forms of aid most prominently considered for Russia were release of some of the frozen Soviet funds, release of 13 Baltic ships immobilized in U. S. harbors and release of the machine tools that have been "on order" for Russia for many months.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, after a call on President Roosevelt, said of Britain's policy that "the best help we could give Russia is to keep on battering Hitler as hard as we can."

It was widely indicated yesterday that the United States would leave up to the British the ticklish question of deciding whether it would be wise to hand over any war equipment to the Russians.

Welles' statement, which he made on behalf of President Roosevelt, left no doubt that only the towering menace of Hitlerism could have induced the American Government to side with Russia's Communist regime.

Communism was denounced in stinging terms as alien to the American way of life, but in even more stringent language the statement flayed Hitlerism for lack of "honor," for scheming world domination and for launching a "treacherous" attack on Russia.

The statement of policy was drafted at conferences between President Roosevelt, Welles and Secretary of State Hull, who is recovering from a slight illness. The statement follows:

"If any further proof could conceivably be required of the real purposes and projects of the present leaders of Germany for world domination, it is now furnished by Hitler's treacherous attack upon Soviet Russia.

"We see once more, beyond peradventure of doubt, with what intent the present government of Germany negotiates "nonaggression pacts." To the leaders of the German Reich sworn engagement to refrain from hostile acts against other countries—engagements regarded in a happier and in a civilized world as contracts to the faithful observance of which the honor of nations themselves was pledged—are but a symbol of deceit, and constitute a dire warning on the part of Germany of hostile and murderous intent. To the present German government the very meaning of the word "honor" is unknown.

"This Government has often stated, and in many of his public statements the President has declared that the United States maintains that freedom to worship God as their conscience dictate is the great and fundamental right of all peoples. This right has been denied to their peoples by both the Nazi and the Soviet governments. To the people of the United States this and other principles and doctrines of communistic dictatorship are as intolerable to government, of the American beliefs, as are the principles and doctrines of Nazi dictatorship. Neither kind of imposed overlordship can have, or will have, any support or any sway in the mode of life, or in the system of government, of the American people.

First Issue Is Hitler

"But the immediate issue that presents itself to the people of the United States is whether the plan for universal conquest, for the cruel and brutal enslavement of all peoples, and for the ultimate destruction of the remaining free democracies, which Hitler is now desperately trying to carry out, is to be successfully halted and defeated.

"That is the present issue which faces a realistic America. It is the issue at this moment which most directly involves our own national defense and the security of the New World in which we live.

"In the opinion of this Government, consequently, and defense against Hitlerism, any rallying of the forces opposing Hitlerism, from whatever source these forces may spring, will hasten the eventual downfall of the present German leaders, and will therefore redoun dto the benefit of our own defense and security.

"Hitler's armies are today the chief dnagers of the Americas."

Leaving the door wide open to a Soviet appeal for air, Welles said that it is up to the President to decide if Russia is eligible for lend-lease assistance and that no official communication had yet been received from the Soviet government.

Lend-Lease Aid Uncertain

The Undersecretary of State told reporters that the President had advised against speculation on the question of lend-lease help for Russia, asserting that yesterday after noon Mr. Roosevelt himself could not say whether the Russians would become beneficiaries of H. R. 1776.

Welles, asked what disposition would be made of Russia's repeated requests to export American machine tools, said the question would be considered in the light of this Government's defense needs and the general United States defense policy. This was intrepreted to mean that Russia would be permitted to buy whatever materials could be spared.

Machine tool exports to Russia have fallen sharply since 1940. Last year the Soviets bought $14,300,000 worth of American machine tools. But growing American needs and increased official concern of Russia's enigmatic policy this year cut exports down to these sums: January, $95,238; February, $484,542; March, $255,038.

"Unfreezing" Deferred

Due to priority accorded American defense orders, Russia has been unable to secure deliveries on millions of dollars of orders offered here for machine tools.

Treasury officials in charge of frozen funds considered the Russian assets at a meeting late yesterday but did not issue an expected general license which would permit Russia to spend any funds it has in this country.

The Russian funds were placed under official controls June 14 along with the assets of virtually all European nations.

Thirteen Baltic ships tied up here are another source of possible aid for Russia which was under official consideration yesterday. Some of the vessels belonged to the Baltic states taken over by Russia last year. They include one Lithuanian vessel, one Latvian, two Esthonian and nine Finnish ships.

In addition, there were ten Russian ships in United States harbors on June 18, but these were free to come and go as they pleased.

The United States, expression of sympathy for Russia appeared to be in answer to the appeal addressed here Sunday by Winston Churchill, Britain's Prime Minister, who said Russia's danger "is our danger and the danger of the United States."

The American policy appeared to be thoroughly in accord with that of Great Britain.

The two governments were as one in denouncing communism but in supporting the Soviet against Germany as the lesser of two evils.

Intense diplomatic activity here, as in other important capitals, marked the second day of the new phase of the war.

Oumansky, the Soviet envoy, called on Halifax, but did not put in an appearance at the State Department.

The State Department was in touch with its Ambassador in Moscow, Laurence Steinhardt, and it was noted that the United States Ambassadors in London and Vichy conferred with the Soviet envoys in those capitals.

the entire front and that the Russian forces have been unable to hold their first, or borderline, defenses along which they had erected fortifications in the past year and a half.

As in previous campaigns, so in this one, the German air force began the invasion eastward by bombing enemy air fields, hangars, barracks, and bridges along the west shoreline of retreat, railway junctions and stations, troop and motorized columns advancing toward the front, and artillery positions. These raids from the air continue, moreover, in rapid succession.

German-Rumanian forces entered Bessarabia yesterday and are now advancing toward the border which until the annexation of Bessarabia by the U. S. S. R. last year separated Russia from Rumania. The German press declares that the Rumanian premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, is in command of the combined German-Rumanian forces operating in this theater.

The Russian navy, meanwhile, is also commanding the attention of the Germans. Reich bombers yesterday attacked "in spite of heavy defense" naval bases and harbors of the Red navy. A particularly strong attack was carried out against a Russian submarine base in the Black Sea. Fires in oil tanks were caused and yards and docks damaged by bombs and machine-gun fire.

The high command admitted today that weak Russian air forces had dropped bombs in East Prussia without causing damage "worthy of mention." This morning, interestingly enough, all German radio stations were twice silent at the order of the high command. The obvious inference is that the Russians were abroad somewhere with their air force.

On the sea the Germans officially declare that their torpedo speedboats pushed into Russian territorial waters in the Baltic and sank a coast guard boat and four enemy merchant vessels, totaling together 5,950 tons. In the Black Sea a group of German and Rumanian light vessels was fired upon by a Russian coastal battery while on reconnaisance patrol. The German-Rumanian forces escaped unscathed, the German high command asserts.

Reports of German soldier-correspondents, meanwhile, provide the only background material of the fighting in the east. In some sections of the new front they complain of terrific dust along the avenues of advance which makes visibility for the individual difficult. One group was reported to have advanced 10 miles into Russian territory in the first four hours of the fighting yesterday.

The campaign in the east is being directed by a quartet of German field marshals—Gen. Sigmund List, Gen. Fedor von Bock, Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Runstedt and Gen. Walther von Reichenau.

New Gift, Estate Taxes Approved

Margie Shows Her Patriotism

Patrolman Charles McQuillan signed her up as an air-raid warden with the observation that she was qualified to "control a crowd best, perhaps." Margie was dressed in red, white and blue sandals and carried a purse to match. She also had on a blue dress and blue hat

Housing Committee Adopts Schedule Increasing Levies

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved a new schedule of gift and estate taxes designated to bring in an additional $113,700,000 in revenue from these sources.

With its tentative agreement on the gift and estate levies, the committee was nearing the end of its search for $3,500,000,000 in new revenue.

New individual and corporate income tax rates already approved are estimated to yield $2,594,600,000 over schedules in the present law.

The committee now faces the job of increasing by about $900,000,000 the excise taxes on such articles as tobacco, liquor, automobiles, gasoline, refrigerators and amusement tickets.

The committee will not resume work on the tax bill until Friday, when its ranking majority and minority members will have returned from the funeral of Senator Pat Harrison, who was chairman of the Finance Committee in the upper house. Some committee members said yesterday they believed excise tax schedules could be completed by Saturday.

Meanwhile, the prospect of continuous tax increases in the years ahead was under discussion at a Rivers and Harbors Committee hearing, where Secretary of Commerce Jones was testifying on the St. Lawrence Waterway.

Jones said the country might as well realize that this year's new tax bill is only a beginning. Taxpayers will really start "to squirm" next year, he added.

Increases in the gift and estate taxes approved yesterday bear most heavily on estates from $45,000 to $200,000. The levies in these brackets are boosted to 175 to 300 per cent of current rates.

The committee retained the present exemption of $40,000 on estate and gift taxes and the present method of calculating gift taxes, which are 75 per cent of the inheritance levy on any sum.

Estate Tax Up Sharply

A $50,000 estate, under present law, would pay a tax of $220. The new bill would call for a levy of $495.

A $200,000 estate, which now yields $21,680, would pay $35,245 under the new schedule. On estates from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 the new rates run only 2 to 3 per cent higher than the present schedules.

Rates are unchanged on estates of $5,000,000 or over. They range from 58 per cent on $8,000,000 to 70 per cent for estates of $50,000,000 or more.

The schedule approved by the committee is much lower than that recommended by the Treasury. The Treasury had asked reduction of the exemption on gift and estate taxes from $40,000 to $25,000 and had suggested a schedule estimated to produce approximately $347,000,000 in additional revenue, against the $113,700,000 the committee rates are expected to yield.

How Proposed Tax Would Hit Estates

Below are shown the amount of taxes on some of the various sized estates under present law and under rates proposed by the Ways and Means Committee. The gift tax rates are uniformly 75 per cent of the estate taxes.

Amount of tax, including 10 per cent surtax:

Net Estate	Present Law	Proposed Law
$50,000...	$220	$495
100,000...	4,620	8,745
1,000,000...	225,720	282,495
100,000,000...	72,521,380	72,685,885

British Battle Vichy Forces At Palmyra

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 23.—British motorized columns, after driving 150 miles over ancient caravan trails, have reached the important desert garrison of Palmyra, in the heart of Syria, and, the British command announced today, "are now meeting with resistance from a Vichy column."

[The United Press said there were unofficial reports that the British had occupied Palmyra.]

Palmyra, 140 miles northeast of Damascus, is astride the northern pipeline from the Mosul oil fields to the Mediterranean coast. An important trading center since ancient times, it is the junction of several strategic desert transport routes.

The British communique also said "allied forces are in contact with Vichy troops west of Damascus. In the town itself, the situation is quiet." British-Free French forces occupied Damascus Saturday.

Informed sources, emphasizing the new importance given the Syrian campaign by its position on the southern flank of the Russian-German battle front, said the next British move would be a pincers thrust on Beirut, coastal capital of Lebanon.

It was expected one drive would be made westward from Damascus toward Beirut, while another allied force, now battling the French around Merdjayoun and Sidon, would attempt to storm the city from the south.

(The French also reported several naval battles early today off Beirut between British ships and a French light naval division.)

A communique of the R. A. F. Middle East command said today British bombers scored a direct hit on a destroyer and fired a merchant ship at Sunday at Beirut.

Australian planes "machine-gunned and destroyed a number of Vichy motor transport vehicles on the Damascut-Beirut road," the communique added.

Spain Debates Sending Troops To Fight Soviet

Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, Spain, June 23.—Many thousands of Spaniards undoubtedly want to organize an expeditionary corps to join the fight on Russia, it was stated in official circles today.

A special meeting of the cabinet was held this afternoon to consider the situation.

[After the meeting, a communique was issued, according to the Associated Press, which said merely that the session will be continued, indicating the ministries have not reached a decision.

[United States Ambassador Alexander W. Weddell, meanwhile, requested an urgent interview with Generalissimo Franco.]

The Spanish army is so short of mechanized equipment and other war materials that it is hard to see how much good a volunteer force would be to the Germans, who have plenty of manpower. On the other hand, Hitler, it is thought might accept the offer in order to bolster up his claim that "Europe is at war with Red Russia," as one of the Madrid papers put it this afternoon.

Poles May Aid If Russia Restores Prewar Borders

London, June 23 (INS)—Gen. Ladislav Sikorski, Premier of Poland's government-in-exile, indicated tonight that Russia must officially recognize the validity of Poland's prewar frontiers if it expects full Polish support in the Russo-German war.

"The German-Soviet war undoubtedly is propitious to Poland," he said, "but it doesn't justify us yet in cooperating actively with the Soviet Union."

Recognition of the old borders, he said, must come first before such "active cooperation" can be considered.

Proposed Bill Would Modify Property Draft

Undersecretary of War Patterson yesterday submitted to the Senate Military Affairs Committee a modified version of the "property seizure" bill, substituting for the broad language of the original measure a specific list of items the President could requisition for defense purposes.

The new bill, Patterson said, is designed to put to rest fears that "we would come up and ask a man for his watch."

Under the substitute legislation the President, in time of national emergency, could requisition any machinery, tools, patents or designs necessary for the manufacture of military or naval equipmtnt.

Patterson said the "summary powers" embodied in the bill would be used "very sparingly" but that the Government must possess the authority "to bring into line a few recalcitrants."

As an example, he cited but did not identify a firm or group of persons now holding the rights for "a new, improved weapon" and preventing the War Department from placing contracts for its manufacture by demanding a price "more than 100 per cent over the cost of actual production."

Admiral Land Agrees

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, another witness before the Senate committee, agreed with Patterson that the property requisition powers would not need to be used often but that the existence of the powers would have a desirable "psychological effect."

"We can handle the little firms, but sometimes we need help to put the screws on the big fellows," he said. Under present law, he added, the Government has encountered delays in taking over "anything from an outhouse to a big plant."

When Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, said the requisition bill would cause "dislocation" in industry and produce "a sorry mess,' Land replied:

"Most wars are sorry messes, and we're almost in this one."

The original property seizure bill would have permitted the President to take over any plant or property in the country when he deemed such action essential to the defense program.

He said the War and Navy Departments do not plan any confiscation under the new measure and intend to give "just and fair" compensation for any property taken over. The bill privides that property owners who do not accept the price set by the President, through the defense agencies, are to be paid 75 per cent of that figure and permitted to sue the United States for further compensation.

The bill gives the President power to sell requisitioned plants or property to private interests if the War and Navy Departments consider such disposition necessary to continued defense production.

Daily Worker To Ask Complete U.S. Aid to Soviet

New York, June 23 (AP).—The Daily Worker tomorrow will call for friendlier and closer United States relations with the Soviet Union and "concrete measures of aid" to implement Undersecretary of State Welles' statement calling the German invasion a treacherous attack.

In an editorial approving Welles' statement, the paper, former official organ of the American Communist Party and still a mirror of official party views, will say in part:

"The sentiment of the American people requires that there be full aid and support to the Soviet Union in its fight against Hitler's attack; that there shall be for example, application of the lease-lend provisions for such aid; that all restrictions and obstacles to United States-Soviet trade, such as have recently blocked machine shipments, for example, shall be immediately lifted; that Soviet credits be freed from restrictions; and that the Government take all other necessary measures necessary to implement a policy of aid and cooperation to the Soviet Union in its just defense against Hitlerism."

Russo-German Fight Reported In Black Sea

army is resisting fiercely.

According to information available here, the Russians are counter-attacking in many sectors. The Red army is said to be pushing forth armored columns against the Germans. Military attaches here say this battling will be decided by the quality of the material used and ability of the two general staffs.

German troops coming from occupied Poland and East Prussia have registered slight advances, according to reports here. Russian reports say the Germans are working slowly forward toward Grodno and Kristnopol.

On the Rumanian front it is believed the Rumanian army is advancing behind German armored columns. At one point it is stated by responsible sources, the Germans have penetrated into Bessarabia a distance of 80 kilometers (about 50 miles) to a region in the vicinity of Tarutin, due south of Chisinau.

Along the southern front the Rumanians and Germans have crossed the Prut River at three points from Galati and the vicinities of Jassy and Lipcani, according to Rumanian sources here.

In Istanbul it is reported the Germans have mined all the key points on the Black Sea coast of Bulgaria and Rumania.

Axis military sources outlined the initial campaign plans accordingly, although admitting that later developments will be aimed at the Caucasus. They say that a strong drive by German troops is being pushed from Lublin, in Poland, along the Kiev Railway, south of the Pripet marshes. Another push is being made from the Bukovina region of Dorohoia, toward Berditchev and Kiev.

These drives are to meet at Kiev, cutting off, it is hoped, about 25 to 35 Soviet divisions which cannot escape north because of the Pripet marshes and which can only avoid capture through the narrowing angle near Kiev if the German plan succeeds, it is said.

Another German column is trying to work its way from Warsaw and East Prussia in the direction of Grodno and Minsk along the railway, and then hopes to turn toward Moscow. This, it is hoped by the Germans, will connect with an army fighting its way across from Finland to Leningrad, which will also try and push through to Moscow, cutting off a half section of the Red army.

Russo-Nazi War May Shift Tokyo's Policy

By Wilfrid Fleisher
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

The effect of the Russo-German war on the situation in the Far East is being watched with the closest attention by officials here who believe it may result in a reorientation of Japanese policy and is likely to render China increasingly dependent upon aid from the United States.

In the view of competent observers there are three courses open to Tokyo:

Japan may choose to remain neutral in the conflict between her Axis ally Germany and the Soviet Union, with whom she only recently entered into a nonaggression pact.

She may turn her attention northward again and may be tempted to seize the maritime province of Siberia if Russian resistance to Germany crumbles.

She may take advantage of Russia's preoccupation to carry out her long delayed drive in the South Seas.

If the German onslaught against Russia is successful, it is conceded, it would be a strong temptation to Japan to seize Siberia with the port of Vladivostok, on which Japan has long had her eyes fixed. Japan's neutrality might therefore not hold for very long.

Under the circumstances, it is believed here that the Japanese will not want to carry on their southward expansion policy. Japan it is felt, cannot relish the prospect of a German advance across Russia toward the east. Officials here therefore look to a reorientation of Japanese policy and a shift in Japan's attention from the south to the north.

This shift may bring with it a political change in Japan, since it would mean a reversal of the policy of appeasement toward Russia championed by Foreign Minister Matsuoka.

Insofar as China is concerned the Russo-German war may have a various effect, since it is likely to cut the Chinese off from Russian aid, one of their main sources of supply, rendering them more dependent upon American help.

Not only will Russia need for herself all the war material at her disposal, but in case the Russians meet reverses they are not likely to be thinking of helping the Chinese. So far Russia has been the largest supplier of aid to China, furnishing airplanes, pilots, small tanks, and a fair quantity of ammunition. Russian fliers, instructors and staff officers have been attached to the Chinese armies.

The United States has promised aid to China under the Lease-Lend bill, but the help has not yet assumed great proportions.

Finnish Credit Here Declared 'Inoperative'

By the Associated Press

Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, said yesterday that the bank's credits to Finland were "inoperative" due to shipping and monetary difficulties.

Pierson said no action had been taken by the bank in connection with the Finnish credits since the Russo-German War broke out. However, he explained, "as a practical matter, they can't use their credits with us."

"They can't ship things that they could buy here with the money and President Roosevelt's freezing order has tied up their money along with all other European countries," Pierson added.

He said he did not know exactly how much of the credits were still unused, but believed that little of a recent $5,000,000 food loan had been spent. He guessed that most of the previous $30,000,000 had been used up, since some of these credits date back to the fall of 1939.

The President's Day

By International News Service

RETURN: It was the President's last day in seclusion. Spokesman passed the word that the Chief Executive would be back at his old stand in the Executive offices today—completely recovered from the last traces of his recent illnesses and raring to go.

WATCH DOG: "Dr. Mac," the Presidential physician, probably has one of the toughest jobs in the "Chief's" exclusive, hard-working bedroom cabinet—that of keeping the President within bounds on days like yesterday. Mr. Roosevelt felt fine—full of the Roosevelt pepper. But Dr. Mac asked for just one more comparatively quiet day, was grudgingly granted by his boss.

COFFEE & WELLES: Early in the morning Mr. Roosevelt got Secretary Hull on the phone about the Russian situation. Shortly afterward he summoned Undersecretary Welles, and over coffee the two doped out the United States' stand re Russia—which Welles took back to the State Department and made public.

FROM LANE TO HALIFAX TO JONES: The President's appointments began with a quickie with Arthur Bliss Lane, still on the books as United States Minister to Yugoslavia, who called to find out what to do next—evidently didn't. Lord Halifax and three of his British Ministry of Supply boys strode up the White House steps promptly at 12:15, strode down again one-half hour later—presumably after a talk with Mr. Roosevelt on Prime Minister Churchill's stand on Russian aid. As they left big, white-haired, hoss-trading Jesse Jones rolled up for a little conversation with the Chief.

BUILD UP: The Presidential diet is aimed at build-up, includes many things he doesn't especially like, and omits his favorites: pastry. Like many other burdened men, the President is also remembering—fairly regularly—to take his vitamin pills, is following the doctor's orders by taking a daily dip in the 87-degree pool, getting to bed early last night in the face of a big and extremely busy day today.

Refused by Dr. Mac was the President's request to attend Congressman Pat Harrison's funeral in Mississippi, lest he lose much of the ground gained during these past secluded, semi-quiet days.

Revolt Reported in Baltic Area

the border at Finnish frontier guards but that these shots also missed the mark.

There was no fighting in Finland, whose neutrality was announced despite Adolf Hitler's declaration that "united with their Finnish comrades." German troops were "standing in the northern Artic" to protect Finnish soil. Under a previous Finnish-German agreement a limited number of German troops were allowed to cross Finland unarmed en route to Norway.

First word of any uprising against Russia came in a broadcast by the Lithuanian radio station at Kaunas which proclaimed a revolt and said a "front of Lithuanian activists" had order the Red flag removed and the Lithuanian standard raised on official buildings.

The broadcast (which received wide publication in Germany) said Col. Kazsis Skirpa had assumed premiership of new anti-Russian government.

Whether German troops or pro-German elements were in control in Kaunas was not known here, but fighting has been reported some 10 miles within the Lithuanian border.

Shortly after the Lithuanian revolt was reported, a Latvian "government in exile" radioed from Koenigsberg a declaration of independence and resistance to the "Russian-British coalition."

Listeners here identified the voice as that of Karl Ulmanis, Nebraska-educated former Latvian president who was deposed by Moscow. Swedish reports a year ago said he had been killed by political assassins.

From Riga, capital of Latvia, came a radio announcement of proclamation of martial law.

Russian Drive Best Nazi Card, Survey Finds

can Adolf Hitler find a nearby source of such vital materials as oil, grains and minerals.

"Nazi Europe and World Trade," a Brookings Institution study by Cleona Lewis, is pointed to officially as a study of the economic forces that drove Hitler to make this, the biggest gamble of his career.

Victories Increase Shortage

The study assumes German control of all of Europe except Russia and states in the Russian sphere. On this basis, the following conclusion is drawn:

"Nazi Europe, taken as a whole, has been a net importer of food and raw materials.

"Without imports of food (and feedstuffs), Nazi Europe's population woud go on short rations.

"Without imported raw materials from fields and forests outside the area, the wheels of industry would turn very slowly."

A nazified Europe must import food and raw materials, the study says, and in the case of raw materials the shortage has been increased by recent German conquests.

Of great importance in Hitler's planning, the study further shows that some of these products come from Russia, but a large part have been supplied from the Americas and British and Dutch colonies, now engaged in resisting the Nazi threat.

For the varius categories of imports, the Brookings report makes these disclosures:

Foodstuffs: Nazi Europe imports about 10 per cent of its grain, 70 per cent of that portion from the Western Hemisphere. About 60 per cent of its vegetable oils are normally imported, all of its cocoa, coffee and tea, more than one-third of its tobacco, almost all its sugar, fruit and wine. Most of these commodities come from distant areas not under Nazi rule or in any immediate danger of capture by Germany.

Dependent for Textiles

Farm and forest raw materials: Nazi Europe must import practically all its cotton, derived chiefly from the United States in normal times. Nazi Europe also depends on outside sources for wool, raw silk, part of its flax and hemp, all of its jute, a lot of its rubber and some timber.

Industrial minerals: Nazi Europe normally imports 80 per cent of the ore and metal base for its crude copper. Well over half came from the Western Hemisphere. Nazi Europe also must import half its lead, 20 per cent of its zinc, 60 per cent of its petroleum and a like proportion of its phosphates. The area also normally imports 90 per cent of its manganese, many of the metals to make steel alloys, and also large amounts of antimony, asbestos, mica and tin. Nazi Europe has export surpluses of iron and steel, and—sometimes—coal. It is self-sufficient in bauxite and aluminum and also in nitrates and potash.

The study makes clear that a trade embargo in peacetime against Nazi Europe by Great Britain, the United States, the Netherlands and other enemies of Germany would not only deprive Germany of raw materials, but would also make it impossible for Germany to sell many of her exportable products which she counts on converting by trade into badly needed imports.

The study also points out that for the area controlled by the Soviet Union, Nazi Europe is the principal market and principal source of supply. Nazi Europe accounted for 55 per cent of Russian-ore trade in 1929, and for 45 per cent in 1937, according to the Brookings report.

Experts Say Nazis Must Win Quickly

spread out in attempting to defend their long frontiers, it is believed that Nazi panzer units will soon break through, and backed by foot troops, envelop and whip the Red army as it did the Polish troops two years ago.

On the other hand, if the Soviet army is able to execute a well-planned retreat, and retire intact to natural defensive positions afforded by the rivers running east of Moscow, it may be able to stand off the Nazis.

If it can do this and hold out for three months, weather and climate will begin to work for the defenders. Until then, the battleground is ideal "terrain for tanks and other features of the German blitzkreig.

Experts here say the destruction of the Russian army will be the objective of the Nazis and there should be little bombing of cities by the German air force during its drive. Germany, it is believed, is launching a huge double-enveloping movement around the Red army's north and south flanks, both Nazi forces aiming to use Russia's great interior rivers to protect their flanks.

At the same time, a main frontal attack directed toward Moscow from Warsaw, a distance of 800 miles, is expected. If this drive succeeds in breaking through, it might then turn right and left to join the enveloping forces from the north and south, attempting to tie the Russian army into two gigantic sacks.

Once the main Red army is licked and the heart of Russia, between Moscow and the Black Sea taken, the rest of the campaign would be a mopping up operation, it is believed.

Time Well Chosen

The German high command chose their time well, it is noted. Crops in the Ukraine are now green and difficult to burn. Later in the season the Russians might have easily destroyed their grain fields and deprived the Nazis of one of the principal prizes of victory.

Also, should the German war machine win a quick victory, there would still be time enough this summer for an invasion attempt on England. If the Russian campaign drags out two or three months or more, they would not have time to prepare for an attack against Britain before winter, many experts believe.

However quick a triumph might be won by the Germans, it is estimated that it will take at least six months for them to repair the ravages of the fighting and begin to get some benefit from the spoils of victory.

The Nazi army may be expected to spare roads, bridges, factories and other facilities as much as possible, just as they did in Poland. On the other hand, it is said, correct Russian strategy should call for devastating the country as they retreat, just as their ancestors did against Napoleon more than a century ago.

Weaknesses of the Red Army are believed to be in its air force, whose planes are inferior to Hitler's; its poor maintenance system—its lack of ability to keep planes, tanks and motors going, and its commanders. Not only has the high Soviet command been weakened by purges, but many of its company officers lack education. The men in the ranks, however, are considered to be first-rate soldiers.

Supreme in West, R.A.F. Blasts Nazi Bases, Bags 20 Planes

"effectively banished" for the first time since it appeared in June, 1940.

He disclosed that planes being used in these British raids are the most numerous loosed since the beginning of the war, and that each craft is carrying bomb loads ranging from 4,000 to more than 8,000 pounds.

Because of diversions of warplanes to the Russian campaign, the German defensive strength on the Western Front, he added, has been cut to a point "where British fighter escorts in daylight outnumber the German planes which attempt to intercept them."

The decrease in the number of German heavy bombers operating in western Europe is startling, he said, although "this does not mean that they can't still blitz British cities, for their Messerschmitts (bomber-fighters) can carry a considerable bomb load."

The British, he went on, have "almost competely reversed the air position in a year," and are now attacking Germany nightly with more bombers per night than the Nazis themselves could loose 12 months ago.

Ruhr "Catching Hell"

Damage already wrought nightly in the Reich, he said, was probably "far greater" even than that created by the Nazis in London last fall.

"I've seen pictures and had other means of seeing the damage," he explained. "You can take it from me that the Ruhr is catching hell. Military targets such as depots in the area back of the coast and along the lateral railroad have been battered. Airfields which were beautifully camouflaged are being knocked around."

NOW IS THE TIME!

The Nazi attack upon Russia is our supreme danger and our supreme opportunity.

The danger is that the Quislings and Nazi stooges in this country will now try to lull us with the bedtime story that Hitler is saving the world from Communism, which all Americans abhor. The danger is that we may delay while Hitler secures his rear for the final assault upon Great Britain and the Western hemisphere. The danger is that Nazi management will take over the vast and hitherto unorganized resources of Russia and perhaps all Asia.

But the Russo-German conflict also presents a supreme opportunity. While Russian resistance lasts, Japan, vulnerable as she is to attack from Siberian bases, will scarcely cast her lot with the Axis.

Our hands are freer than they have been since the war started to use our naval strength in the Atlantic.

Now is the time for us to act in clearing the Atlantic ocean of Nazi raiders where they might secure possible jumping-off places for attack on this Hemisphere.

At last Hitler has exposed his back by attacking his fellow dictator. His propaganda drive to the West has been met head-on by the rugged words of Winston Churchill warning of that purpose. AND IN HIS PROPAGANDA BATTLE AGAINST AMERICA WE SHALL NOT BE HIS DUPES AGAIN.

Our fixed and overwhelming conviction is that the "bloodthirsty guttersnipe" of Wilhelmstrasse is the mortal enemy of mankind. Our purpose to defeat him has been written into law.

It has never been true that it was too late—that Hitler could not be beaten. And now—at last—it is clearer than ever before that swift action will destroy him. Delay must not be granted him this time—while he adds to his vast Gestapo-ruled domain. It is, in Hitler's own braggart words, his world or ours.

Let's go, then, America.
Let us strike with all the mighty force which this free and bounteous land holds.
Let us strike by air and by sea and if possible by land.
Let there be no lagging hands.
It is war—war to the death.

30 Senators Will Attend Harrison Rites

A third of the Senate's membership last night boarded the special train that is taking the body of Senator Pat Harrison back to his home town of Gulfport, Miss.

With the 30 Senators are a score of Representatives, the largest Congressional delegation to pay this final tribute to a colleague since the death of Majority Leader Robinson in 1937.

The funeral services will be held in Gulfport at 2:30 a. m. tomorrow.

All afternoon yesterday the body of Senator Harrison lay in state in the well of the Senate chamber where he served for 23 years.

4,000 Pay Respects

More than 4,000 persons filed past the flag-draped casket. Senators, Representatives, Government officials, Capitol employes, tourists and Mississippi men and women who now live in Washington made up the 4-hour procession.

Nearby was a wreath of pink gladioli sent by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Harrison, who was 59, died here early Sunday.

The Senate convened only long enough yesterday to receive official notice of his death and adopt a resolution expressing "profound sorrow." It will not meet again until Thursday.

The House adjourned early out of respect to the Mississippi Senator, after hearing tributes from members of the Mississippi delegation and Republican Representatives Treadway, Plumley, Fish and Crowther.

President Roosevelt will be represented at the funeral tomorrow by his secretary, Stephen Early.

As a result of Senator Harrison's death, the Senate will face a major shift in committee assignments when it returns to work at the end of the week.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, was frequently mentioned yesterday as a successor to Harrison in the chairmanship of the powerful Finance Committee.

The Texan is outranked on the committee by Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia; Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, but all already have major posts.

Edelstein Successor To Be Elected July 29

Two-Cent Boost Forecast in Milk Price Here

class 1 milk, except that which is sold to needy families. For this the price is $1.99. This differential of $1.18 is twice as great as it is in other cities, said Derrick.

"We feel," he declared, "that the contribution of the milk producers in this area has been liberal in behalf of this program."

Unless a compensatory economy can be effected in distribution costs, granting of the penny increase on surplus milk for needy Washingtonians would almost certainly result in curtailment of that program.

Including premiums, producers now receive approximately 5 cents a quart for milk sold at that price to reliefers, compared with 7½ cents for that which goes into regular commercial channels. The Federal subsidy takes care of the handling charge of 3 cents per bottle on the nickel quarts.

A price increase would make one of the following necessary:

Increase the Federal subsidy proportionately.

Reduce the distribution cost on this low-cost milk, possibly by selling it at retail stores, mainly groceries, instead of at WPA-manned milk depots as at present.

Raise the price to the consumer to 6 cents.

A 6-cent price undoubtedly would lower participation in the program, a 20 per cent increase being a major deterrent to impoverished families. And none of the alternatives is conducive to expansion of the program—which is sorely needed.

Rigid eligibility regulations are holding sales of 5-cent milk to an average of 3,000 bottles daily. Liberalization of the rules and improvement of distribution methods would increase that fourfold or more.

In addition, public school, welfare and WPA authorities have applied for a Federally-subsidized project which would put penny half-pints of milk in the schools for undernourished children, increasing consumption approximately 200 per cent.

Chances of obtaining this program would be dimmed if the producer price for surplus class 1 milk went to 6 cents a quart—unless Federal subsidy funds were unexpectedly large and the Surplus Marketing Administration looked with favor on the proposed Washington project.

Haskell Donoho, of the Agriculture Department solicitor's office, presided over yesterday's hearing, held in the departmental auditorium. It will be resumed at 9:30 a. m. today at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building.

The nearest thing to a clash occurred when Sefton Darr, counsel for Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, chided Derrick on the producer association's proclivities in signing up dairy farmers before Embassy-Fairfax got to them with contracts.

The dairy is one of seveday doing business in Washington which buy their milk from "independents." Association members reportedly supply about 90 per cent of the milk consumed in the Capital.

Mrs. Ella J. Roller, of Cheverly, Md., representing the Prince Georges Milk Buying Club, protested against a price increase. She said it would be a nutritional menace by decreasing consumption. Results of a canvas taken of 101 families at Greenbelt, the Federal housing community, were presented by Mrs. Roller to support her argument people will drink less milk if they have to pay more for it.

In his lengthy statement, read with Elwood Seal, former corporation consel and now counsel for the producers group at his side. Derrick gave numerous statistics on production costs, labor supply and costs, lack of rainfall and other factors which he held to justify a price increase.

He urged that the rise be made effective not later than August 1.

"The Army camps of Meade, Edgewood, Aberdeen, Fort Myer, Belvoir and others in our area have been employing ordinary farm help as carpenters at a reported wage of $8 to $14 a day," said Derrick.

"There is ample opportunity for those who have been on WPA pay rolls to obtain regular employment on farms today if they care to take advantage of it. However, it has been the experience of our producers that the WPA workers would shun and reject farm work because once he left WPA he could not return to take advantage of its benefits."

Army Wants Some Selects Over Year

about 30 have troop commands. There are now division commanders as young as 52, whereas a year ago most of them were near 60.

The chief of staff said the 100,000 additional men contemplated would not be an expansion of the Army framework. Original plans for a 1,414,000-man force did not include men for the leased island bases, or as many antitank units as are now considered necessary. The Army has already asked 155,000 men more for an expansion of the Air Corps, and about 120,000 officers are required for the contemplated force.

Gen. Marshal said that Army and Navy chiefs are taking steps to coordinate the Nation's land, water and air forces for any future unified action by creating "task forces" designed and trained for specific jobs.

Directives for such forces are drawn up by the joint Army and Navy board, and approved by the President. One such "task force," Marshall said, is a landing force unit of Army troops and Marines, commanded by a Marine officer. Navy dive bombers similarly are to be temporarily assigned to the Army for field maneuvers this summer, he said.

Navy Invokes Civil Service in Strike

who have declared the San Francisco stoppage an outlaw strike and have vainly appealed to the local to return to work, would encourage importation of machinists from Los Angeles to enter the yards as civil service employes.

Greenslade predicted 'an immediate and wholehearted response" to his proposal. He said that machinists going into civil service would thereby have "joined the Navy" and would be entitled "to see the world" from the main top of a country secure for them and their children."

Even though the machinists have been striking for higher wages and double time for overtime, they have declared that one of the major reasons for their refusal to heed pleas of the national officers and, indirectly, of President Roosevelt, to go back to work, has been Bethlehem's failure to grant a closed shop.

All other shipbuilding yards on the Pacific Coast, including the other ten in the bay area, have signed the master contract.

Among other labor developments yesterday was a charge of A. D. Lewis, C. I. O. official, whose United Construction Workers Organizing Committee recently chartered a former Minneapolis local of the A. F. of L. teamsters' union, that the latter organization had imported "not less than 300 hoodlums" to harass the new C. I. O. group.

Lewis made public a telegram of Frank Barnhart, Midwest regional director of the U. C. W. O. C., reporting that "mobs of imported hoodlums are raiding local truck terminals and warehouses at the point of knife and gun, forcing C. I. O. employes to wear A. F. of L. teamsters' buttons and sign A. F. of L. cards."

The U. W. O. C.'s action in granting a charter followed a trial of the local leaders on charges of "extreme radicalism." When the leaders bolted to the C. I. O., President Roosevelt inferentially scored the granting of a new charter as an act of "raiding" by the C. I. O.

In Washington, it was reported that a modification of the Selective Service Administration's "work or fight" order, forecast last week, would probably take the form of permitting reclassification of only those strikers who remain out of work for more than 60 or 90 days.

The order, issued by Selective Service Director Gen. Lewis B. Hershey at the time of the North American Aviation strike, instructs local draft boards to reclassify for active service those strikers who had previously been exempted by reason of their jobs in defense industries.

These regulations have been considered too severe and as militating against workers out on a legitimate strike.

Wedgwood-Inspired Motif—Charmingly New for Your Pretty "Personals"

Daintiness inspired by the famous English earthenware—dressing up your gowns, slips and panties, too—this Wedgwood motif has an airy beauty particularly right for Summer. It reminds you of Mexican drawnwork—on a background of soft, sheer rayon crepe. Flattering fit—with trim waistlines. Choose white, tearose or blue.

Broadway Also Suffers Paucity of Stage Plays

Only 13 Sprout Where 70 Once Flourished; A Celebrated Figure Is Restored to Life; News Notes and Gossip of Amusements

THERE ARE THOSE STILL LIVING who can remember a time when Broadway—meaning any street in New York with a theater on it—had as many as 70 stage attractions zooming along simultaneously for the depletion of the public purse. This week it has 13. That must be an eloquent commentary on something or other, war boom or no war boom.

GENE AUTRY

Three of the current exhibits in Manhattan are musicals; an even 10, by one standard or another, may be classed as dramas. Only one producer has two concurrent plays among the 10. He is Herman Shumlin. And his brace of plays is not so bad. One is Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," voted by the critics the best play of the year by an American author; the other Emlyn Williams' "The Corn Is Green," accorded the same distinction among works by foreign playwrights, which Washington was fortunate enough to see, prior to New York, with Ethel Barrymore in the stellar role. There is no end in sight for the run of either piece.

This paucity of legitimate offerings on the Main Stem is cited here as a partial, between-seasons answer to those who wonder why the Capital has only one tabernacle of living drama during the winter months of all-out production. What could be booked into another one?

Incidentally, when "The Corn Is Green" reaches its 258th performance on July 5, Ethel Barrymore will have enjoyed the longest run she has ever had in New York in all of her 45 years in the American theater. Her best previous record was set up in Zoe Akins' "Declasse," in 1919, with 233 performances in W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife" coming next.

Communications Department

Now I am convinced that when you get a personally signed letter from Gene Autry, top man among the current crop of singing cowpunchers, you really get a personally signed letter from Gene Autry. "This is the first opportunity I have had to write and tell you how much I appreciated your interest in my Washington visit. . . . I understand from Dave Whalen, my press man, that at the time of my visit you were suffering from a badly ulcerated tooth, which I trust is giving you no more trouble. If we come to Washington, or you are out our way, I hope we can get together for a pleasant visit." So do I. And thanks for getting the name and data straight. That tooth long since has gone to its happy munching ground.

We were the one who pulled the boner in a recent celebration of Welford Beaton and the anniversary number of his Hollywood Spectator. We referred to Mr. Beaton as brother of the "late Kenneth C. Beaton, etc." Then came the war! "My thanks for the top billing you gave the Spectator in The Post of June 4. I took the clipping over to my brother's place and found him up a walnut tree, busily engaged in sawing off a limb which was bending too low over the driveway. I stood below and read the start of it to him, and down through the foliage came: 'That's the third guy who's killed me. I wish you would ask him is he can trace my death to its source.'" No I can't. All I know is that "K. C. B.," for some reason, has been on the mortuary page of my book since goodness knows when. Quite obviously, he is very much alive—and kicking!

First Times Out

When "Men and Ships" is presented for the first time on a Washington screen tomorrow, theatergoers will view a film dedicated to the sea and this country's merchant marine that is as carefully documented as, say, the Government fostered films of "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and "The River." Under the sponsorship of the Marine Commission, it brings an encouraging message to the public at a time when it is most needed. . . . The other half of the new bill will be devoted to the Little's "Chaplin Film Festival." . . . Remembering the success of his last appearance at the Earle, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson will "break in" his new revue on the same stage, come Friday, aided and abetted by Managing Director Harry Anger. . . . With the cooperation of the National Press Club, Loew's Capitol will unloose "Three Cheers" on its stage, July 3. . . . Written and composed by Howard Acton, Phelps Adams and Bob Davidson, the revue will feature the song, "Wave the Flag, America," introduced in the Press Club Minstrel Show late in May.

Bette Bares Secret

Hollywood, Calif., June 23.

Bette Davis, who in days gone by kept herself entirely free from any personal property, now has two homes—good ones, too; one here, the other in New Hampshire.

DOROTHY LAMOUR

As you know, she's been quietly vacationing to build up her Eastern home and finally admitted to me there was a special reason for it. As soon as Bette winds up her Warners contract, she's quitting the movies, for a time at least, and will go back to her first love—the New York stage.

"I don't believe in dashing back and forth between the two," said Bette, "and I'm sure Katharine Hepburn has the wisest idea, and hope I'm as lucky as she was with 'Philadelphia Story.' I'll try to find myself a good play, stick with it as long as the public will; then, if Hollywood calls, bring it here for a movie. That way," twinkled Bette, who's supposedly arguing with Willie Wyler over how her part in "Little Foxes" should be played. "I'd know exactly what my role should be before I even landed at Pasadena." Smart girl, that Davis.

Maybe this is the reason Dottie Lamour and Greg Bautzer are cutting their visit short in Honolulu. They were dining at a swank place over there when a party at an adjoining table started making wisecracks and unflattering remarks, whereupon Greg stood up, took off his coat, and said, "You want to make something of it?" Well, the man didn't—and went on eating his dinner.

'Twas then Dottie got into the argument with some uncomplimentary remarks about the inhabitants of the island. All of this was highlighted in an editorial on the front page of the Honolulu paper which ended by predicting that Miss Lamour's visit would be cut short. If that's their idea of a good neighbor policy, maybe they'd better stay home where the neighbors are used to it.

Hollywood's preparing quite a welcome for Victor Moore, who wasn't "done right" by our Hollywood producers last time here. This will be a different story, because his old stage boss, Buddy De Sylva, will be in the saddle when he brings "Louisiana Purchase' to the screen . . . Irene Franklin's gone. So are her baby songs—gone but never forgotten.

Just got notices of Lois Moran's performance as Viola in "Twelfth Night," at the Greek Theater in Berkeley, Calif. John Hobart reports, "Hers was such a triumphal comeback, such an unconditional success that Miss Moran must feel a little sorry that she stayed away this long. She was completely enchanting." Now if any of our scouts were smart enough to be there, I'll bet more than buttons Lois will be offered a screen role in the near future. As far as Lois' beauty is concerned, time has stood still; but through marriage and motherhood, she's gained poise we could use on the screen.

Although 'twas Marlene Dietrich sang "I'm Falling in Love Again" for our boys at Ford Ord and Camp Hunter Liggett, it was Virginia O'Brien (whose career was launched by our village druggist) that the boys really fell in love with. She and Ray Bolger stopped the show.

A pat for Ed Morrow, Jack Benny writer, for giving up his vacation to write skits which will entertain our encamped soldiers.

Gentlemen, Please Take Notice

MARION MARTIN

who ought to be greatly preferred, although we don't believe those eyelashes. This blonde beauty will be seen with the Marx Brothers in "The Big Store" and with Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in "Mexican Spitfire's Baby," an RKO-Radio opus

LEONARD LYONS

Platinum Problem

New York, June 23.

William S. Knudsen and Leon Henderson held a conference last week, to discuss one of the priority questions . . . "We need platinum," said Knudsen, "and so we'll put that on the priorities list" . . . "Does that go for all kinds of platinum," asked Henderson, "such as—blondes?" . . . "Platinum blondes," Knudsen told the Nation's price-stabilizer. "We'll turn that matter over to you—because that's clearly a matter of civilian, and not Government, consumption."

WILLIAM SAROYAN

A few years ago, while Maurice Ravel was still alive, Jack Warner met him in Paris. The movie producer, who had been impressed by the belated success of Ravel's composition, "Bolero," suggested that he come to Hollywood and write the music for one picture . . . Ravel displayed no interest—until Warner mentioned a $100,000 salary . . . an amount far beyond the composer's lifetime earnings . . . Ravel asked: "How much music would you want?" . . . "An hour-and-a-half, that's all. Just an hour-and-a-half of music. How long would it take you to write it?" . . . "Oh, not long," said Ravel; "I'd say—four or five years."

Paul Lukas related this story of his early days in N. Y., when he met Jimmy Walker—who discussed Lukas' native city, Budapest . . . "When I was there I heard a gypsy band play at a place called the Kokuk," sighed the then Mayor of New York. "Oh, how I'd love to hear that gypsy band again" . . . On the day before Lukas had met the leader of that gypsy band in New York. The musicians had come from Budapest to entertain at the home of a Hungarian diplomat—Count Czechenyi, husband of a Vanderbilt . . . "So you love that band?" Lukas asked Walker. "If you'll give a party tomorrow night at Central Park Casino I guarantee to have that same band there" . . . The incredulous mayor gave that party—and that same Kokuk orchestra played the same melodies which had so impressed themselves upon his memory . . . "It's the same band. The tunes are the same," said Walker unhappily . . . "Yes, I know," Lukas agreed. "They're awful."

CONVERSATION: Two British writers—Christopher Isherwood and R. C. Sheriff—are in Hollywood now, and found themselves sitting in adjoining booths. Isherwood said: "Oh, hello. You still here?" . . . Sheriff said: "Yes. You?" . . . Isherwood: "Yes. Got a good picture?" . . . Sheriff: "Oh, fairly. You?" . . . Isherwood: "Oh, yes. Fairly" . . . Sheriff: "What's it about?" . . . Isherwood: "Amnesia" . . . Sheriff. "Oh. Like Hilton's book" . . . Isherwood: "Haven't read it" . . . Sheriff: "It's about a chap that gets married to a girl, and gets amnesia, and then marries the same girl again" . . . Isherwood: "Small world, what?"

TRIUMPH: Betsy Blair is the girl who stepped from the dance-line of "Panama Hattie" into the leading role of "The Beautiful People," and now is being besieged by movie offers. This is how Miss Blair, who had no other theatrical experience, got the job . . . William Saroyan arrived in New York and went to see his former employe, Gene Kelly, perform in "Pal Joey." He sent a note backstage, asking Gene to meet him at a nearby restaurant. They sat there discussing the new play, when Saroyan suddenly stopped—attracted by a pretty girl who had just entered the room—exactly the kind of entrance she later was to make in "The Beautiful People" . . . "There she is, "said Saroyan, "the girl who's going to play in the lead in my show."

"Don't be so impulsive," Kelly told the author. "She's my girl, Betsy Blair. I told her to meet me here. Better audition her first, to make sure that she can do the job—before she gives up the job she now has" . . . And so the next night, after the audience and the cast of "Pal Joey" had left the Ethel Barrymore Theater, Saroyan and Kelly seated themselves in the last row. With a single light as the only illumination, Betsy made her entrance and spoke the first line of the long script she had memorized . . . "That's all," Saroyan interrupted, and left the theater . . . "Wait, give her a chance. Not just one line," Kelly protested. "You're being unfair to her." "No, that's all," said Saroyan. "She's hired."

'Water Follies of 1941' Brings First Aquacade to Capital

By Richard L. Coe

It wasn't the cloudburst that caused the big splash over in Northeast last night. Rather, it was the arrival of the "Water Follies of 1941" at the Uline-Ice Arena, where Mr. Uline, putting his glacial contraptions thoroughly at the service of palates for this parching present, has installed a huge tank, a school of mermaids and a handful of swimming stars headed by the celebrated Larry (Buster) Crabbe. It's novel, diverting and funny.

Picture in the center of Mr. Uline's vast arena a large tank—75 feet long, 25 feet wide, glittering with 80,000 gallons of the reliable aqua—uniced. Into this, during the course of some two hours, drop a shapely chorus of 16 girls, who swim the way the Roxyettes dance on ladders; a group of sleek specialty swimmers, most of whom emphasize the comic; a superbly graceful duo, the Hopkins Twins, and the skillful Mr. Crabbe. Such was the galaxy that last night's rain-sneerers were treated to. To this add tricky lighting effects, which weren't ready in time for the opening, and a fuller house of burghers, not discouraged by water from heaven, and you have a show that will be a real hit.

The First for Washington

The Snyders' "Water Follies" is the first big-time water musical to visit this booming Capital. Connoisseurs of the Billy Rose extravaganzas at both the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs won't find this roving aqua-carnival so super-colossally gigantic, to coin an understatement, but even those peripatetic souls will grant it's got the essence of the thing—skillful diving, roisterous comedy and—girls. But the stay-at-homes will lap (figuratively) it up, which is just the hint the program gives: "If the mountain will not come to Mahomet—Mahomet will go to the mountain."

In this fourth edition of the "Water Follies" (though founded in 1936, most of its cast was busy at the thriving Aquacades last season) are a number of sparkling athletes less familiar than the films' Mr. Crabbe. There are the Hopkins Twins, two lithe sisters whose unison is something that will amaze you—especially when they weave a neat "Two Hearts in Three-quarter Time" with Crabbe. There is a 235-pounder Charlie Diehl, who swims as though he weighed about 100 flat. Joe Seymour and Jimmy Rice are two other chaps from the West Coast whose diving has made them nationally recognized champions.

A Star Comic

Top spot for the comics goes to Larry Griswold, as adept a waterbuffoon as the Shipstead chap is on ice. He manages to cover a lot of water in clothes that will set you guessing.

As for the modest Buster "Tarzan" Crabbe, he illustrates a swell outline of swimming, tracing the evolution of his medium from man's imitation of the fishes to the slam-bang American crawl. And in Act II you'll think he's under water for good!

Altogether, you'll find the second act snappier than the first, with the accent on comedy. There's music in the revue, too, with Marion Roberge handling the vocals and Arthur Spaulding as master-of-ceremonies.

And for your seat-buying, here's a tip: Get as high in the stands as you can for the best effect. Sitting "down front," you miss the stroke motions and the ensemble movements; as for the comedy, you can't miss it no matter how far away you sit from the tank.

The "Follies" continue through Monday evening at the Arena, Third and M Streets northeast, with matinees tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

Director at Studio On Busman Holiday

Maj. W. S. Van Dyke is as bad as the postman who takes a walk on his day off. The former M-G-M director had exactly two days furlough from his Marine Corps duties and he spent one entire day on a studio sound stage.

But it was the set of "Smilin' Through," where he was welcomed not only by the star, Jeanette MacDonald, whose last picture, "Bitter Sweet," he directed, but by the entire crew. It is the same crew with whom he worked for the past ten years.

Chess Men

Brian Aherne and Ian Hunter play chess in several of their scenes in "Smilin' Through." Neither one knew the game before the film. Now they're so interested they've hired a chess expert to teach them the fine points and can't be pried loose from the chessboard when away from the camera.

Prince Georges Assault Suspect Held for Jury

A colored man accused of kicking and beating a University Park, Md., housewife when he allegedly broke into her home last Thursday, was held on three charges for the October session of the Prince Georges County grand jury at a hearing which lasted less than 3 minutes yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Frank Jones, 34, of 2251 Twelfth Street Northwest, pleaded guilty to two charges of housebreaking and one of assault with intent to kill. Bail was set by Judge Walter Green at $5,000 for each charge.

The assault occurred when Mrs. A. H. Nagers, 31, of 107 Rustic Road, discovered a man in the dining room of her home. Prince Georges County police reported they found hundreds of dollars worth of stolen goods in Jones' home. He has been questioned concerning a number of robberies in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Washington police questioned him in connection with the Strieff murder case shortly after his arrest by Prince Georges County officers and Patrolman B. J. Nolan, of the Maryland State police, who seized the man as he attempted to flee.

Detectives John Wise and Fred Rawlinson, who are investigating the Strieff case, said Jones claimed he was at his mother's home near Laurel, Md., when the War Department clerk was killed. His alibi has not been shaken.

Mrs. Nagers, her face still bruised, appeared in court but was not asked to testify.

Committee Orders Police Inquiry

lead in the mystery has been developed, Homicide Chief Darnall said last night.

Stung by police failure to make appreciable headway in the Strieff case or to solve other recent murders, the District Committee ordered the investigation after nearly two hours of debate behind closed doors.

Secret Inquiry Opposed

The committee assigned to the probe members of its regular Police and Fire Subcommittee and Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, who made the original demand for an investigation.

Hebert last night promised a determined fight against any move to turn the investigation into a star-chamber proceeding.

"It is my belief that this investigation should be conducted so that, if the police are at fault, the public will know about it, and if the police are not at fault, the public, in all fairness, will know that, too," declared Hebert, who was formerly city editor of the New Orleans newspaper that broke the Louisiana scandals.

"It is in the interest of the public," he continued, "that it should be kept abreast of developments and fully informed as to the procedure of the investigation as it develops.

"I definitely am not in favor of any secret investigation or star-chamber session. This is the public's business and the public should be part and parcel of it."

Choice of Schulte Praised

Hebert praised the selection of Schulte to head the investigation.

At police headquarters, clew after clew was run down by detectives without result.

Police last night were questioning two colored men in connection with the slaying.

One was a 21-year-old boy, who lives in the 1700 block U Street Northwest, and who was overheard to warn: "Sh, don't talk," when a companion said to him: "You sure did mess up that girl." The conversation, according to the police informant, took place last night at Twenty-first and P Streets Northwest. Detectives said the youth admitted being in the alley between Florida Avenue and Vernon Streets the fatal Sunday which Miss Strieff is believed to have used as a short-cut during the storm. But police were of the belief that the youth was a practical joker who had nothing to do with the case.

Also being quizzed was a man arrested in Prince Georges County, Md., last Thursday after he had allegedly assaulted a white woman, who later identified him as her assailant. Police were attempting to determine his whereabouts the Sunday Miss Strieff was murdered.

Efforts to link a 24-year-old colored man, arrested Sunday night, with the Strieff case fizzled after his alibi held. His arrest followed the rape of a 27-year-old colored woman in an alley in the rear of the 400 block of N Street Northwest. Lieut. Darnall said the man will not be held in the assault case.

Another "clew," a blood-stained bed sheet, also was eliminated. A frame of an umbrella and a white transparent umbrella, similar to the one Betty Strieff carried when she left her apartment June 15 to purchase a stickof butter, also were of no help to police.

A squad of detectives Sunday night toured the vicinity of Betty Strieff's apartment house, 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest; retraced steps she might have taken on her way to Peter Duncan's grocery store at 1810 Florida Avenue Northwest, and then visited the garage in the rear of 1717 Q Street Northwest, where Miss Strieff's battered body was discovered Monday morning, June 16.

"It gave up nothing new," Lieut. Darnall said last night.

Judge to Act On Extradition In Attack Case

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, of District Court, today is facing the decision of whether to turn over a colored man to North Carolina authorities who charge him with attacking a 67-year-old white woman or of sustaining a writ of habeas corpus which would prevent his extradition from the District.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts previously had issued an order extraditing the defendant, William Mason Wellman, to North Carolina. Justice Goldsborough can reverse Justice Letts' action, attorneys said. A decision is expected today.

Wellman testified on the witness stand yesterday that he was employed by the Charles H. Tompkins Construction Co. at Fort Belvoir during the entire month of last February when the Statesville (N. C.) woman was attacked. His attorneys are Edward Berger, James Washington and Andrew Ransome. They placed a fellow construction worker and a foreman on the stand.

Attorneys attempting to extradite Wellman to North Carolina are Robert H. McNeil, of Washington; E. M. Land, of Statesville, N. C., and Charles L. Coggins, State's attorney for North Carolina.

The woman who was attacked last February 11 took the stand yesterday, and when asked who had assaulted her, pointed to Wellman and declared, "That is the man."

The prosecution also brought forward as witnesses Gertrude Ingram, colored, of Statesville, who testified she saw Wellman in the vicinity of the elderly woman's home the day she was attacked; J. W. Moore, sheriff of Iredul County, and R. B. Wright, captain of the guard of the District Jail where the two women said they identified Wellman.

Two more witnesses will be produced by the defense today before the case rests.

WPA And The District

It is reassuring to hear that the District Commissioners are going to put forth every effort to prevent suffering on the part of local residents because of the 50 per cent slash in WPA funds. The discharge of 4,000 WPA workers is certain to inflict hardships on many individuals unless other jobs can be found or local relief provided. It is up to the Commissioners to point the way out of this dilemma without waiting for one Federal agency to step in and relieve the distress caused by the precipitate action of another.

Protests to the WPA, however, are not the most constructive approach. Every city official ought to face problems of relief and public welfare in these trying times with full realization that WPA funds must be cut. The time has come for local governments to reassume their obligations of providing sustenance for their unemployed and destitute citizens. For the sharp curtailment now being made in relief work may well mark the beginning of the end of WPA. Continuation of that agency could be justified only so long as the volume of unemployment created relief problems too big for local governments to handle. Now shortages of skilled workers in many industries are a national concern. Millions of men still need training for work they are not now qualified to do, but in most parts of the country there is very little excuse for the spending of Federal funds on projects designed chiefly to create work.

So the real task of the District Commissioners is not to fight for continuation of an outmoded job-creating system, but to adjust their plans to the new situation. To be sure, many District institutions as well as citizens have come to rely heavily upon WPA help. Loss of that help will create temporary hardships for them. But the longer such a break is postponed the harder it becomes. And most students of government will agree that, in the long run, there is nothing to be gained and much to be lost by dividing responsibility for public health, education and similar functions between permanent and temporary agencies.

What the District's municipal-service institutions need is not a crutch to lean on after they have been crippled by neglect. Rather the need is a candid and realistic consideration of their requirements when District appropriation bills are enacted. No greater absurdity has developed in American government than the theory that we cannot afford to do in the name of health and education what we do in the name of unemployment relief. This is no time to trifle with such fallacies. The District Commissioners have a real opportunity to point the way toward better local government by making arrangements to take back the responsibilities which have been relinquished to the WPA. Of course, the cooperation of Congress will be necessary. Particularly when large numbers of relief workers are discharged, flexibility in giving direct aid to jobless men must be provided. It is difficult to believe, however, that Congress will fail to see the desirability of shifting such expenditures to the local budget if the issue is properly presented.

Gain In Syria

With the capture of Damascus, the occupation of Tadmur (Palmyra) and the steady tightening of the ring around Beirut, the British and Free French forces seeking to wrest control of Syria and Lebanon from Vichy agents appear to have made real headway in recent days. The army of Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, the French high commissioner for the mandated territories in Syria and Lebanon, is now facing encirclement by the Allies. Should they lose Beirut, their jig would be up. Thus the prospect of Syria and Lebanon being fully taken over by the Allies is now very real. At the same time the danger of a Nazi thrust on Suez Canal from the north would be eliminated, at least temporarily.

The fighting on that long front separating the Third Reich from the Soviet Union may also have a bearing on the struggle in Africa. It is doubtful whether Hitler will be able to spare any large number of troops, tanks and planes to reinforce Gen. Rommel's army in Libya. In the circumstances a prolonged Russo-German struggle may give Gen. Wavell another opportunity for offensive action against the Axis forces in North Africa, and may enable him in due course to repeat the drive which he carried out against the Italians under Graziani earlier this year. Never before has the war been in as fluid a state as at present.

Mr. Welles' Realism

The statement issued by Mr. Sumner Welles yesterday goes to the very core of the confusion which has arisen over the Russo-German war. The core is that there has been no change in Hitler's overweening ambition to run the world. Rather the global extent of the Nazi ambition has been underlined. And it has been underlined with a clarity that cannot be mistaken, and advertised by methods which disdain all the accepted codes of behavior that form the roots of our Western civilization. A "realistic" America will forget this demonstration only at its peril.

The Welles statement does not disregard the distaste with which right-thinking Americans view the unsavory record of Stalin's Russia. The Soviet government equally with the Nazi government is anathema to our people. But our first job is the extirpation of Hitlerism. This is the immediate issue, an issue which, as Mr. Sumner Welles expresses it, "is "whether the plan for universal conquest, for the cruel and brutal enslavement of all peoples, and for the ultimate destruction of the remaining free democracies, which Hitler is now desperately trying to carry out, is to be successfully halted and defeated." Contrasted with this menace, the danger presented by Stalin is secondary. It is so secondary that the man in the Kremlin has hitherto been playing jackal to Hitler's juggernaut.

Hitler, indeed, could probably have taken the Soviet Union, which is almost eaten away with administrative rottenness and which seems to be fed down to the farthermost collective on the oil from Baku, without any fighting. That he did not choose to do so is due to the world stake for which Hitler is playing. He cannot get world control all the way by war. He must soften, cajole, and steal his way to control, as well as fight for it. The time had come with the rupture of the last pretense of friendly relations existing between our Government and his for the mobilization of all his weapons. He had to take a terrific chance. On the one hand, all the admonitions of German high policy back to Bismarck forbade him to indulge in a "two-front war." On the other, the fear of American participation must have been eating into his, as into every German, heart. His best bet, then, was to split America in two by falling upon his lesser rival as the enemy of civilization, and standing forth after victory as the savior of the world against communism.

It is against this devilish maneuver that the Welles statement is aimed. Unfortunately for Hitler, the pathology of Hitlerism has been studied in Washington, and Hitler's words as well as his deeds are written down by way of aid to study. In Mein Kampf Hitler exhibits his contempt for democratic intelligence in very simple language. He likens the "broad masses of the people" to a "vacillating crowd of human children who are constantly hovering between one idea and the other." This is what Lord Cromer would have called the "keypoint" in his new diversion. Hitler hopes that by switching the democratic hate from anti-Hitlerism to anti-communism he can keep America quiet till he has consolidated enough conquests to enable him to undermine the Western Hemisphere, and cow the United States. The Welles statement shows the Administration rising to the new challenge. This diplomatic awareness should be translated all down our industrial line in a redoubled effort to bolster up the fighting British as they prepare to take full advantage of the Russo-German opportunity.

Pat Harrison

A great public servant has passed away in Senator Pat Harrison, and his death will be mourned on both sides of the Senate. From the age of 23 until his death at 59, Pat Harrison held public office. After serving six years as district attorney, he was elected to the House from his native State, Mississippi. He entered the Senate in 1919. Under our elective system of government only a very few members of Congress remain long enough in office to acquire the knowledge and the experience that enable them to give the best service of which they are capable. When to lengthy experience personal ability is added, the result is a legislator who, like Senator Harrison, stands out from his fellows. Mr. Harrison was best known for his work as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee—a position that he has held since the advent of the Roosevelt Administration. Although instrumental in putting through much early New Deal legislation regarded as radical at the time, Mr. Harrison leaned, in principle, toward conservatism and orthodoxy in fiscal affairs. He did not see eye to eye with Presidential advisers who advocated spending for the sake of recovery, and in recent years he had frequently urged retrenchment and resistance to the importunities of pressure groups.

Relations between the President and the Senator from Mississippi have not always been harmonious. Three years ago, indeed, their differences of opinion over the undivided profits tax led to open disagreement and acrimonious debate. This near revolt followed Senator Harrison's defeat for the position of Senate leader as successor to the late Senator Robinson—a defeat due to the fact that Senator Barkley was the President's choice. While the increasingly critical attitude of Mr. Harrison toward Administration policies may have been attributable to some extent to this slight, he remained a party regular who could always be counted upon in an emergency. When the defense issue arose, for instance, hard feelings were forgotten, and he became one of the Administration's chief aides in the drive for passage of the lease-lend measure. Indeed, it is said that, despite ill health, he insisted upon staying in the chamber till the opposition had been defeated. Had he lived he would undoubtedly have devoted himself wholeheartedly and enthusiastically to the task of piloting the defense tax program through the Senate. His untimely death will be deeply regretted not only by his numerous friends, but by everybody who realizes how important it is to have legislative deliberations guided by men combining expert knowledge with the skill of the trained politician.

Finnish Quandary

When Hitler called the Finns his allies in the new war on Soviet Russia, he was counting on more than the traditional Finnish hatred for the Russian Bear. Finland has its own peculiar affiliations with Germany, though not with Nazism. In the Finnish base of Hango, at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, which the Finns last winter had to cede to Soviet Russia, there is a memorial to the Germans for the help they gave to Finland in aiding that country after World War I to win its independence from Russia. Finnish-German relations, to be sure, underwent a strain during the Russo-Finnish war. But Hitler's new explanation of German resentment of Russia's Baltic (including Finnish) seizures, may sound in some Finnish ears, coupled with the outbreak of war itself, as a note of expiation. Anyway, the great problem for Finland is the removal of the Russian menace.

It is now clear as crystal that Soviet Russia invaded Finland 18 months ago out of fear of Germany. The Gulf of Finland affords entry from the Baltic to Russia's second city, Petrograd. It looked to Stalin as if Hitler meant to make the Baltic into a German lake. In that event the Gulf of Finland would come under Germany's domination, along with the Baltic states abutting upon Russia in the west. That is why Moscow was forehanded in sealing the Gulf of Finland at Finland's expense. In other words, Stalin's war on Finland was nothing more or less than a fear-struck effort to carve out a "safety belt" for the Soviet Union. At the time Berlin could not protest. After all, Stalin was a sort of ally of Hitler, and Nazi Germany was dependent in its greater war with Britain upon an uninterrupted supply of materials from and through Soviet Russia. Germany, accordingly, had to go along with Russia in Finland. No doubt there were Nazi assurances to Finland that the Germans would help eventually in promoting a Finnish revanche. And there is little doubt that the Germans actually had a hand in the Russo-Finnish peace making.

The sight of Finland wobbling back in the direction of Germany may not be agreeable to anti-Hitler America. But its position should be appreciated before final judgment is passed upon Finland. The Finns, geographically and economically, simply cannot afford to take a large view of the world problem. They are caught in a vise between Russia and Germany, as they used to be caught in a vise between Russia and Sweden. There is little egress to the outside world, moreover, except through the Arctic port of Petsamo, from which only a trickle of trade can be maintained. And, since Finland is dependent upon trade with the outside world, conditions in Finland have become highly adverse. These conditions have been accentuated by Russian acquisitions in Karelia, which called for an immense resettlement of Finnish population.

This is the problem that Finland faces now that Russo-German relations have been broken off. She is trying desperately to stay neutral. For, as Minister Procope said Sunday, she is first, last and all the time pro-Finnish. But, if the Nazis decide to extend the northern theater of their attack on the Soviet Union to the Gulf of Finland, then she may have to side with one or the other, or perish. And the ally could never be Russia, in view of the way in which, from imperial times on, the Russians have ravished Finland.

SOMEBODY MAKES IT GO

The horses are only wood,
The music is only sound,
But oh! what joy to be the boy
Who works on the merry-go-round!
Where duty is clothed with wings
Philosophers grey and profound
Might ponder on things more brass than the rings
Of the boy on the merry-go-round.

Thoughtful and heavy hearted
We also are hurried around,
Not certain to reach where we started,
Not certain of solid ground
But galloping over the circuit
Hoping one day to be found
In the midst of the run just riding for fun,
Working the merry-go-round!

Arlington Speaks Up

In your editorial of June 18, 1941, discussing the murder of Miss Jessie Strieff and crime conditions, in general, in Washington, you say:

"Much of the difficulty, of course, lies in the anomalous circumstances that the Washington police are in no wise directly responsible to public opinion . . . The plain truth is that the Capital of the Nation which is now gravely concerned about the safety of the world, is itself an unsafe place in which to live."

About 10 days ago you published an editorial advocating the return of Arlington County to the District of Columbia. As a resident of Arlington, I say to you that the conditions outlined above constitute one of the major reasons why any proposal to restore Arlington County to the District immediately arouses so much opposition on the other side of the river.

I believe that the existing conditions in Washington are wholly unnecessary; that they are the direct and inevitable result of the coddling of a growing criminal element, and that we can look for crimes of violence to become progressively worse as long as the present mistaken policies are indulged in.

Since the people of Arlington could do nothing to cure these conditions, they are better off in Virginia where they can exercise some influence in the matter of law enforcement.

Moving Federal Agencies

As a former resident of the District of Columbia I would like to protest the reported plan to move the Interstate Commerce Commission from Washington to Chicago.

The Chicago Tribune, in a recent editorial, advocated the moving to Chicago of several governmental agencies and departments, such as Social Security, Interstate Commerce Commission, Farm Security, etc. The reasons given were that Chicago was centrally located and that the increased pay roll would help the city immensely.

However, I am sure that the majority of our citizens feel that Washington should remain the Capital of our country in all respects. If one of these commissions is moved to Chicago every other large city in the country will ask for the removal of some agency or commission to their city.

Trust The President

Many "isolatonists" are clamoring for a referendum to be held in reference to the United States entry into the war. These "isolationists" assume that due to the fact that Americans are a peace loving people, the majority will declare themselves against such an entry. Hitler has been able to use this prevailing anti-war sentiment in the democracies to his advantage and their tragic misfortunes.

Such a referendum would be, however, both impractical and un-American. In the face of ever-changing conditions, situations may arise demanding swift and decisive actions, (as well as resulting in a reversal of public opinion). Furthermore, the average citizen has neither the specialized knowledge, nor the amount of information, necessary to make such life and death decisions. It is for that reason that he elects the President and the Congress, for the purpose of governing the country.

The present administration is aware of its great responsibility to the American people, and has shown no disposition to thrust the country into war. In view of the menacing world situation, however, the future is difficult to predict. The wisest course for the American people to follow, is to remain united behind their President and to trust to the wisdom and patriotism of the man they elected, to guide our ship of state.

Noisy Taxis

Are those countless taxicabs that use E Street as a speedway and dominate it between Union Station and the White House and beyond, and who hornfully resent the intervention of mere pedestrians and the presence of "civilian" or nonprofessional cars, exempt from the anti-noise law, or has the same begun to grow tired and languish, as widely predicted?

I might add one or two score other stretches, but you get the general idea? HANK BREEN

Axis Intentions

For salvation from Naziism, we need full vision. And for full vision, we need full imagination. And, because we judge the Nazis by our own freedom-loving selves, we good-natured Americans will have to use our imaginations in a most total fashion, if we are to understand the dead-seriousness with which the Nazis are taking their blitz drive to total world conquest and the total enslavement of all mankind.

While we seem still half-hearted, with our "short of war" measures, and our large shipments of gasoline to Hitler's ally, Japan, we cannot learn at any earlier date than today that the Axis is totally determined to destroy all freedom wherever it exists, even freedom to do right, and be righteous, according as we see it. And our love of freedom, if it be anything like a real and genuine love, demands that we become equally total in our determination to destroy Naziism at all costs, including actual and total war.

Only those who fail to appreciate the value of freedom will fail to agree that the rather limited duration of war is incomparably preferable to the unlimited duration of the dark horror of world-slavery, in which every soul—all of us, and all of whom we love—must feel the sharp whips of the slave drivers come down upon our backs, and know the toil and terror which destroys men's bodies and demoralizes their very souls.

It would be a tame man, indeed, who would prefer to await the sure coming of such slavery, rather than go forward to meet it, with all its war-making powers, and triumph over it completely. Of such men, freedom was not born; and of such men, humanity can never hope to reach its goal.

Lawrence And Zionism

In the June 17 issue of The Washington Post there is an article by Mr. Andre Visson entitled "Syrian Drama." In this article Mr. Visson states that Lawrence of Arabia was opposed to the Zionist movement, considering it a "breach of promise to the Arabs."

This statement is in grave error, and runs counter to every existent statement ever made by Lawrence on the problem. First, Lawrence was Emir Feisal's adviser at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, and, in this capacity, was still the Emir's adviser when Feisal signed the agreement with Dr. Chaim Weitzman, who represents the Zionist movement, regarding Palestine. Article three of this agreement expressly states that the British government's declaration of November 2, 1917 (commonly known as the Balfour Declaration), was the accepted formula for the section of the Near East known as Palestine.

Second, in a letter to Robert Graves, who was writing a book on Lawrence in 1927, Lawrence wrote: "Zionist success will enormously reinforce the material development of Arab Syria and Iraq." There were many other occasions in which Lawrence expressed himself on the positive value of Zionism to the very Arabs he loved and worked with.

I have spoken to many men who knew Lawrence personally, in England and in the Near East, and this attitude of Lawrence's has been confirmed by them.

Churchill's Speech

Churchill's speech was everything we expected, showing courage, determination to fight to the end and refusal to parley with Hitler. There was nothing else for him to do but declare instantly his purpose to support Russia as he would join with every enemy of Hitler.

But we are distressed to know exactly how England can help Russia. A few men and some bombers with technicians will be but a small contribution in a war of such magnitude.

Hitler outwitted us in securing Finland as an ally. The Finns who won our admiration for their magnificent fight against the Soviet, yielded to the spirit of revenge. They will get promises from Hitler of reward, restoration of the land the Soviets stole in the last fight, when Finland won the admiration of the world. Hitler will also give the Finns Leningrad—but for how long.

We have been showing in our local court during the past week, that the Soviets are the enemy of all religion; that has been part of the Government case against some Soviet agents.

Are we now to withdraw all we have said about the Soviets and grant to these atheists liberal amounts from our seven billion lease-lend money?

I am all for England, without "ifs or ands," caring but little for the remaining shreds of international law which may be picked up here or there to interfere with our delivery of material which will enable her to lick Hitler, but I am very reluctant to see one dollar of American money sent into Soviet Russia to uphold that hideous system of state.

America is entitled to a complete statement in detail of how England can help Russia, before America allows one dollar of American money to enrich the Soviet swindler.

Churchill reminded the world of Quisling. Observe this as a prophecy. Stalin will be unhorsed before many months with Molotov as a new man in charge. He or whoever Hitler puts in power will immediately announce Russia's fight against the capitalistic states, England and America.

Go slow, Uncle Sam on any deal with the Soviet. Remember "The Bear that Walks Like a Man."

The Post Impressionist

Crusaders

As a small boy I had often bought stick candy, peppermint preferred, in "Josh" L'Hommedieu's grocery and I played marbles with freckled-face Arthur, his son. My grandfather always warned me not to enter the rear room in the grocery, and I frequently wondered why I should be given this stern admonition.

Fred Heath occasionally sold me soda water, coffee-flavor, drawn from the one and only fountain in the village. It was not always very cold but was delicious. The men who visited his drug store, however, evidently did not care for soda water from the fountain in front. There must have been another fountain back of the partition, and I wondered about that, too.

Strange to say these questions slept in memory until recently awakened by a manuscript deposited in the Library of Congress, which described certain events that happened before Arthur L'Hommedieu and I were born. The manuscript unfolded the following story.

To the good women of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, is due the credit for being the original anti-whisky crusaders. The Washingtonian reformation of the early and middle forties, followed by the efficient operations of the Sons of Temperance, had made Cuyahoga Falls, Akron and many other villages on the Western Reserve of Ohio prohibition towns. In the mid 1830's, however, encroachments of the beer and whisky traffic were such as to produce serious alarm among the female sex. A vigorous revival of the temperance cause was soon inaugurated, supported by axes, hatchets, and hammers wielded by good right arms.

Committees, which were appointed to visit the various dealers to plead with them to abandon their traffic, met with but partial success, and sterner measures were at length determined upon. On a Saturday morning a large volunteer force of women, all well armed and in solid phalanx, began their attack upon King Alcohol.

The first place visited was the room of Capt. Isaac Lewis, over the postoffice. On reaching the top of the stairs and finding the door locked, they proceeded to batter it down and demolish sundry jugs, bottles, etc., removing a barrel of ale to the street below and emptying its foaming contents into the gutter.

Next the grocery and liquor store of Joshua L'Hommedieu, on the lower floor of the same building, was visited. Having heard of the intended raid, Josh had removed his liquors from the cellar to a smokehouse in the rear. But the crusaders were equal to the emergency, and soon whisky, Otard brandy, and other liquors were flowing in miniature torrents toward the Cuyahoga River.

The next point visited was the place of Mr. John Tifft, who received his callers with great courtesy, placing before them a collection of doughnuts, pies, etc., and pleasantly turning over to them all the liquors he had left—part of a barrel of beer—which they also poured into the street gutter.

At Rockwell's place nothing was found. Jones' variety store on the south side of Broad Street, near the covered bridge, had been cleaned and garnished for their reception by the removal of all liquors to the rear of his store, where they were covered with rubbish. But the women were too keen-scented and sharp-sighted for the success of this ruse, and Jones' two barrels of whisky, and other liquors were soon mixing with the pellucid waters of the Cuyahoga.

The saloon of "Hen" Lindsey, across the way, was next visited, a few bottles only—said to have been filled with water—being demolished, for his main stock in trade had been previously spirited away.

At the American House, the proprietor refused to give his visitors access to his liquor cellar and they became so demonstrative that Justice of the Peace Charles W. Wetmore was called in to read the riot act, and admonish them to "disperse and depart to their several homes and lawful employments." But they failed to disperse and were proceeding to batter down the cellar door, when an armistice was brought about by the landlord's pledging not to furnish any more liquors to the people of the town.

The last place visited was Heath's drug store, the door of which was barred against them. They were appeased by assurances from the proprietor similar to those made by the landlord of the American, though it was stated that such arrangements had been made, that had entrance to the store been effected, the discharge of certain chemicals would have made the visit anything but agreeable.

Though these proceedings were irregular and illegal, it is but just to say that the great majority of the law-abiding people of the village sympathized with the movement. Among the ladies participating in the crusade was Mrs. Elizabeth W. Wait, wife of Dr. George A. Wait, a dealer in millinery and fancy goods. Against Mr. and Mrs. Wait, Mr. Joshua L'Hommedieu brought suit before Justice Wetmore for $100, value of one barrel of brandy. The case lingered for some time in the courts, but ultimately "Josh" had to pay the costs.

Several years passed. Memory recalls a scene wherein a maiden aunt and several other women knelt in the snow outside Gus Biederman's saloon. Stepping forward to the dawn of this century, another picture comes to mind: The writer, a newspaper reporter, was seated in a New York Central diner. A waiter uncorked a bottle of ale and placed it near his plate. The reporter happened to glance across the aisle. There he saw a face glowering at him. The face protruded from the athletic form of Carrie Nation. He did not drink the ale.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Russian Campaign

WHILE THE NAZI PROPAGANDA is already engaged in presenting the Nazi-Soviet war as a convenient and inexpensive substitute for the great war between Hitler and the free nations, Hitler himself has disposed of that wishful notion. In his proclamation to the German people, his main charge against Soviet Russia was that during his western campaign against Holland, Belgium, France, and Britain, the Soviets began to concentrate their troops on the eastern frontiers of Germany. And "thus," said Hitler, "there resulted British-Soviet Russian cooperation intended mainly at the tying up of such powerful forces in the east that a radical conclusion of the war in the west, particularly as regards aircraft, could no longer be vouched for by the German high command."

LIPPMANN

This is both a tremendous admission and a tremendous disclosure. Hitler has told the German people that he has been unable to conquer Britain because he has had to tie up too large a part of his forces, particularly of his air fleets, facing Russia. This admission, explaining his failure to win the war, is also a disclosure of his primary purpose in attacking Russia.

It is to free himself for the final all-out attack on Britain—an attack aimed not at a negotiated peace but at "a radical conclusion of the war," namely the conquest and subjugation of Britain. In the face of Hitler's own statements there is no ground on which anyone can profess to believe that Hitler is merely "expanding" into Russia. Hitler is forced to try to knock out Russia so that he may have both hands free to knock out Great Britain and her allies. He has undertaken the war on two fronts in order to get rid of one front and concentrate all his forces on the other front.

THUS WE HAVE the proof, and with it Hitler's own admission confirming it, that he has to conquer Britain or he is lost, and that he has to fight a war with Russia in order to get ready to begin to conquer Britain. This is a very different estimate of the real military situation than that which Col. Lindbergh has been offering us with so much self-assurance. All the time while Col. Lindbergh has been telling us that the British cause was already lost, and while many were believing him because they were depressed by the minor campaigns in the Balkans and in Crete, Hitler and the German High Command knew they could not begin to win the war until they had organized a new campaign which "as regards extent, compares with the greatest the world hitherto has seen."

Even Col. Lindbergh ought now to see that there must have been something wrong with his own military information and his own capacity to judge military affairs when, despite all the Lindbergh prophecies of the imminent doom of Britain, Hitler finds it necessary to fight this gigantic campaign merely to get ready for the final attack on Great Britain.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that, unless we are incredibly foolish, our own situation is vastly improved by this disclosure that Hitler is not immediately able to seek a decisive victory in the World War. Some time must elapse before he can even attempt to win the war, and this time which we have gained is, providing we do not waste it, the greatest good fortune which has come to us since the war began.

Our purpose is to make this hemisphere secure by making sure that the control of the seas remain in friendly hands. For this purpose we are arming ourselves. For this purpose we support Britain and mean to keep Hitler from establishing himself where he can seek to control the Atlantic Ocean. For this purpose we stand on guard in the Pacific, seeking to deter Japan from opening up a naval war in the Pacific in conjunction with Hitler's war in the Atlantic.

THE RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN means that for some time to come Hitler cannot make a full attack on Britain, and that for some time to come, therefore, Britain can not only build up her reserves but can even begin to take the offensive, at least in the air. Obviously then, this is the time to speed up and to insure deliveries to Britain. This also is the time, while Hitler is busy in Russia, to push for a settlement with Vichy and with other feeble and untrustworthy states which hold points of strategic importance to the security of the Atlantic Ocean and of the Western Hemisphere.

And this is the time to make an effort to reach a satisfactory settlement with Japan. In postponing his final assault on Britain, Hitler has left Mr. Matsuoka in the lurch. For Japan cannot contemplate an attack upon Singapore and the Netherlands Indies except in conjunction with an all-out attack by Hitler on the British Isles and in the Middle East. For the time being, and until and unless Hitler has conquered Russia and reorganized his own forces, the naval power of America is amply sufficient to restrain Japan in the Pacific and to reinforce greatly the British in the Atlantic.

THIS TEMPORARY IMPROVEMENT of our own position in both oceans is accompanied by a deterioration of Japan's position in the Far East. The Nazi conquest of Russia would make Japan's nearest neighbor a Nazi state. That cannot be reassuring to the Japanese. It may also mean a Nazi penetration via Russia of China and India. And in the event of a final victory by Hitler it would mean a Nazi claim to the Netherlands empire. There cannot be many Japanese who think it prudent to risk war with the United States in order to bring the Nazis into Siberia, China, India, and the islands of the Pacific.

Therefore, since we have the power to deter Japan and an interest in not fighting Japan, the elements of a profound diplomatic action exist. They should be resolutely used for the great object of a wide settlement in the Far East in which, along with the restoration of peace, Japan rejoins the company of the nations which she ought never to have left.

House Petition Opposes Cut In Tariffs for South America

By the Associated Press

Representatives of wool producers and processors expressed divergent views before the Committee for Reciprocity Information yesterday on proposed trade agreements with Argentina and Uruguay.

C. J. Fawcett, of the National Wool Marketing Corporation at Boston, said the suggested commitments, entailing tariff reductions on wool, as well as other items, would "be more or less in the nature of a gift to the growers in South America."

From Ralph Whitaker, Philadelphia processor, came the observation that woolen mills could manufacture better popular priced fabrics if the tariffs were lowered on imports from Latin America.

Representative August W. Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, submitted to the committee a petition which he said was signed by nearly 100 Republican members of the House protesting the proposed trade agreements.

Among points in the petition was the charge that it would be illogical to lower duties on competitive agricultural products inasmuch as the Government has for eight years tried to raise farm prices and control surpluses.

Corned Beef For Army

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—The United States Army, in the market for 6,000,000 pounds of canned corned beef, opened bids today from 11 meat packing houses or their representatives.

Nine of the bidders offered South American beef. Three bid on both domestic and South American products.

The Army quartermaster depot here said that the amounts of the bids would not be announced until import duties and other special factors had been computed to establish base prices.

Jones Supports Waterway Plan

Copyright by New York Times

Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, and Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, warned yesterday that the Nation might face a "long pull" on defense preparations and urged the development of the St. Lawrence Seaway and power project as a step in making the country safe from attack.

"The United States must be ready to meet war on any basis," Jones told the House Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The Makers Of Japan

By Wilbur Burton

Forerunners Of Fascists

JAPAN MAY BE best understood if viewed as the first of modern totalitarian states — a combination of ancient Asiatic theocracy with mass literacy, 16-inch guns, tanks and airplanes.

For the makers of modern Japan in the latter half of the century were the forerunners of the Fascists in Italy, the Bolsheviks in Russia, and the Nazis in Germany in creating a social set-up of men and machines, with all individuality subordinated to the general party line of the governing gang.

They called themselves "Restorationists;" but actually, as Professor B. H. Chamberlain has put it, they "invented a new religion" — emperor-worship. And their general party line, the first ever to be drilled into a people by mass education, was the inviolability and infallibility of the Mikado, or Emperor, as a living god.

This means that Japanese practical politics ever pertain to retaining or obtaining physical possession of the emperor in order to invoke him, for no nominal ruler of any country is more of a figurehead. In England, too, everything is done in the name of the king, but a democratic Parliament decides what is to be done—or there is a new general election. This is possible because English mass education is on the basis that the crown is only the symbol of the state. But in Japan in 1935 the veteran and eminent Dr. Tatsukichi Minobe, lecturer on constitutional law at the Tokyo University, was forced from his post and all his books were banned because of his theory that the emperor was "an organ of the state" instead of the state itself.

HEREIN IS the difference—and also the significance of emperor-worship. And here, too, is why a half century of it has regimented the Japanese into abject acceptance of dictatorship by the army—that has always loudest invoked the emperor and, constitutionally, is answerable only to him, which means that it is answerable only to itself so long as it provides the guards for his gilded cage and the gendarmes for mass "thought control."

The invention and development of emperor-worship is one of the least known phenomena of our times, and Japanese official propaganda has been so widespread and pronounced that most people have probably accepted the allegation of the current Mikado, Hirohito, being 124th Emperor "in an unbroken dynasty" and "uninterrupted succession" from Jimmu in 660 B. C. Also it is undoubtedly popularly regarded even in America that "bushido" is the ancient knighly code of Dai Nippon.

ACTUALLY, there is no authentic Japanese history further back than 600 A. D. and the very word "bushido" cannot be found in any dictionary, native or foreign, prior to 1900. Furthermore, as pointed out by Professor Chamberlain—greatest of Western authorities on Japan, and who gave the Japanese their first grammar—"no nation probably ever treated its sovereigns more cavalierly than the Japanese have done . . . Emperors have been deposed . . . assassinated . . . exiled . . . In the fourteenth century things came to such a pass that two rival imperial lines defied each other for the space of 58 years . . . and it was the northern court, branded by later historians as usurping and illegitimately, that ultimately won the day, and handed on the imperial regalia to its successors.

After that, as indeed before that, for long centuries the government was in the hands of Mayors of the Palace, who substituted one infant sovereign for another, generally forcing each to abdicate as soon as he approached "man's estate."

Nevertheless, the Japanese reigning family is probably the oldest in the world with the possible exception of that of Ethiopia. This, however, is because of the less stringent Japanese rules for legitimacy. Mikados may be merely the sons of concubines, or even adopted from outside the family—adoption under the family name being common practice throughout Japan. Certainly the family of the present Mikado line, in one branch or another, has occupied the throne since the dawn of Japanese history about 1,300 years ago.

BUT UNTIL the last half of the last century the Mikado rarely, if ever, had any real authority—contrary to popular opinion abroad even in those times. Townsend Harris, first American diplomatic envoy, recorded that officials "spoke almost contemptuously of the Mikado, and roared with laughter when I quoted some remarks concerning the veneration in which he is held by the Japanese." They added, he said, that "he is a mere cipher," but his assent to a treaty was equivalent to "God has spoken."

Submission of state papers to him, however, was "a mere form"—which is still true. Two other dicta of Harris on the Japanese may be recalled today: "I do not think," he said, "any Japanese ever tells the truth if it can be possibly avoided;" and also that "the Japanese yielded nothing except from fear."

The peculiar position of the Mikado in those days is what led to his even more peculiar position today. For although powerless, he was a symbol that could be invoked for national unity—like Woden in Hitlerian Germany. And the first use of him in modern Japan, shortly after Perry's visit, was an order in his name for prayers at seven leading shrines for destruction of foreigners!

THEN THE OTHERWISE modern-minded "Restorationists" took him up and rapidly invented both history and religion for the first totalitarian state to combine Asiatic theocracy with European scientific technique. Ancient legends of the Mikado's descent from the Sun Goddess Amaterasuomikami were given the status of gospel truth, and propaganda depicted a long past "golden age" when he ruled as a god over a divinely descended people. Purely feudal concepts—of fealty of liege to lord—were given the fanatically chauvinistic form of salvation through patriotism that was called "bushido" and passed off as the code of Japan in its "golden age" under the god-emperor.

The ancient native animistic religion of Shinto—that had been largely replaced by Buddhism as the Japanese acquired a measure of civilization—was revived as the state faith with emperor-worship as its new core. And the heart of the formal constitution promulgated in 1889 was that "the person of the emperor is sacred and inviolable" and "the emperor declares war, makes peace and concludes treaties."

In the name of the emperor and to worship him properly it was now necessary for every family to contribute as many children as possible to the state. Previously, Japan—alone among all Asiatic countries—had deliberately limited population by infanticide, which was called by the same name, "mabiki," as for thinning a field of vegetables; among the samurai it had not been fashionable to have more than three living children. In the new order, contraception became counter-revolutionary.

Such was the gist of Mikado totalitarianism. The rest is history.

WITH THE DEVELOPMENT of popular education, emperor-worship was daily taught in every school throughout the land. The emperor's picture was placed in every school for teachers and pupils to kowtow to regularly, and the new height of heroism was to save it even at cost of life in case of fire. And while for a period in the present century there seemed to be some democratic development in Japan despite emperor-worship, the actual course was ever more rigorous "thought-control" to prevent the spread of any ideas that might conflict with a ruthlessly chauvinistic national policy.

So, regardless of the personality of the emperor—the last one ended his days a madman, and the present one is an affable mediocrity—the army assumed increasing control until it had complete control. This is appropriately symbolized in the latest phase of emperor-worship as manifested in the occupied areas of China—by all Chinese and Japanese being forced to bow bare-headed to every sentry proxy of Dai Nippon's living god.

The Sugar Bill Defended

A Statement By Senator O'Mahoney

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that you have published the reply of the Maritime Association of New York to your editorial of June 8 expressing approval of the sugar bill introduced by Senator Adams, of Colorado and the undersigned, the supporters of this legislation are under a double obligation to you, for Mr. Callaghan's letter has clearly revealed the insubstantial and sectional character of the opposition to this proposal, I venture to set forth a few undisputable facts to demonstrate the soundness of your own editorial opinion and the weakness of Mr. Callaghan's argument.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, and now pending in the House, is very similar to a measure introduced in that body by Representative Harry Coffee, of Nebraska, and approved several weeks ago by the House Committee on Agriculture. The bill, therefore, has the indorsement of a substantial majority of the United States Senate and of an important standing committee of the House. It can be defeated only if opponents succeed in confusing the issue which was set forth with admirable clarity in The Post editorial of June 8.

The proposal is simply that, in the present emergency with an acknowledged shortage of shipping, domestic sources of sugar supply be first utilized to fill the anticipated Philippine deficit before certain Latin-American countries are given a larger share in the American market than they have ever enjoyed. The position of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York is that the farmers and planters of 23 States and 3 island possessions should not be permitted to utilize their present productive capacity to supply the American market with sugar the Philippines cannot deliver. It argues that American consumers should be made even more dependent than they now are on foreign sources of supply, even though the Nation is confronted with a shipping crisis and is in great need of strategic commodities like rubber and tin.

These are commodities which must come from overseas because they cannot be supplied by the sugar States nor even by the Port of New York. It is probable that the Maritime Association of the Port of New York might more profitably devote its energies to an attempt to secure shipping to bring in these necessary supplies rather than to the attempt to cut down a domestic agricultural industry and thus risk a shortage of sugar as well as of rubber and tin.

Mr. Callaghan has with commendable frankness acknowledged his "bias," to use his own word. He warns us that he speaks only for the shipping industry of a great port. We are therefore the better able to judge the merit of his arguments when, for an imagined benefit to his city, he advocates the suppression of beet and cane farming in more than a third of the United States. I think the facts demonstrate that he is in error.

"In the first place," says he, "No agency of the United States Government connected with shipping and defense has ever stated that an expansion in the beet sugar industry is necessary to relieve a shipping shortage."

Very well. Let's look at the record.

On April 5 last the Maritime Commission, having been charged by the President with the duty of making a survey of shipping facilities, addressed a letter to the Secretary of Agriculture in which is definitely and explicitly recommended the reallocation of the Philippine sugar quota.

This is what the Maritime Commission wrote:

"As of March 25 there remained approximately 635,000 tons of duty-free Philippine sugars to be brought to this country in accordance with established quotas. While we cannot give you an accurate estimate at this time it is apparent from the demands for ships and space that consideration should be given to the reallocation of quotas if this can be done, so that the quantity of sugar to be transported from the Philippines can be reduced and the ships made available for the transportation of other strategic commodities which are urgently required in the defense effort. A reduction in the required importation of sugar from the Philippines will make tonnage available for the transportation of rubber, tin, ores, wool, and other strategic commodities which must be brought to this country in large quantities from the Straits, the Dutch East Indies, the Philippines, and Australia."

The need of rubber is so great that only last week the Government suspended all private imports of that commodity from the Far East and effective today, according to the announcement of Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones, a Government defense corporation has become the exclusive buyer of rubber imported into the United States from the Far East. But the Maritime Association of the Port of New York wants to use ships for sugar instead of for rubber although the farmers of 23 States, if permitted, can grow more sugar.

On May 31, the division of priorities, Office of Production Management, issued a statement in which it said that copper had been on that day added to the list of vital defense metals under mandatory, industry-wide control. It pointed out that copper is urgently needed for the manufacture of shell cases, small arms ammunition, fire-control equipment, power and telephone equipment, switchboards, generators and parts in plane motors.

But the Maritime Association of the Port of New York wants to use ships to transport the sugar American farmers can raise, instead of using them for copper. In the face of the specific recommendations of the Maritime Commission for a reallocation of the Philippine quota and of the official declarations of that commission, of the RFC and the OPM, Mr. Callaghan seeks to convey the impression that the defense agencies have never taken a position and that there is really no shipping shortage.

The Maritime Commission wants to use ships for rubber, tin, ores and other strategic commodities instead of for sugar, but the Maritime Association of the Port of New York wants the House of Representatives to defeat the sugar bill so that instead of using our own home-grown sugar beets and sugar cane to supply the Philippine deficit, we must become dependent on Peru and San Domingo.

If, however, it will be difficult if not impossible to secure enough ships for Chilean copper, as OPM predicts, where are we going to find the ships for Peruvian sugar?

Here then are the irrefutable facts:

1. This country urgently needs rubber, tin, ores and other strategic commodities from the general area of the Philippines.

2. This country urgently needs copper from South America.

3. The United States Maritime Commission, for the purpose of obtaining strategic commodities, recommends that shipping from the Philippines be used to transport these commodities rather than sugar.

4. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is prepared to buy 500,000 tons of Chilean copper, but the Office of Production Management seriously doubts whether there will be sufficient shipping available to bring in all the copper we need.

5. The New York Journal of Commerce shows that shipping rates have increased approximately 500 per cent in the last eight months.

6. The beet farmers of the United States, who have been compelled this year to reduce their plantings by 170,000 acres, and the producers of Louisiana and Florida sugar cane, who will be permitted to market only 275,000 tons while they are capable of producing 500,000, can supply sugar for the American consumer without the use of a single ship and without impeding the importation of strategic commodities needed for national and hemispheric defense. Let me remark that it is a good deal more important for San Domingo, Peru, Cuba and, incidentally, the Port of New York, that we get rubber, tin and copper in sufficient quantities to perfect our hemispheric defenses than that Latin America send in and New York City receive sugar which we can produce at home.

It will be noted that the brunt of Mr. Callaghan's attack is directed against the growing of sugar beets and he charges that this domestic industry is subsidized by the Government at the expense of the consumers of this country. This is a common charge by those who do not understand the sugar law and those who understand it so well that they would like to undo it for the purpose of making the consumers of the United States once more wholly dependent upon the seaboard refiners of cane sugar.

The charge is demonstrably unsound. It is supported by arguments which, consciously or unconsciously, misrepresent the facts, as in the case of Mr. Callaghan's misquotation of Vice President Wallace. In his letter to you, he writes about "subsidy system for sugar which, according to the Vice President of the United States, Henry A. Wallace, costs consumers and the public Treasury some $350,000,000 a year." Vice President Wallace has not made any such statement. As Secretary of Agriculture, he indorsed and supported sugar legislation from the beginning. In 1937, when a decision of the Supreme Court had invalidated the processing tax and when the sugar industry was seeking to continue the quota system without the tax, Secretary Wallace argued for the tax, but not against the quota system nor against the beet sugar industry.

A reading of the whole letter shows that the argument of Mr. Wallace was that a sugar act without a processing tax would result in undue profits for the refiner at the expense of both the farmers and the consumers. It will be observed that the Secretary was comparing the cost of sugar to American consumers in 1936 to the depressed prices that prevailed in the world market. The whole purpose of the sugar legislation was to provide reasonable prices and a stabilized market for all engaged in the sugar industry—producers, processors, seaboard refiners, agriculture workers, refinery workers and consumers. It was enacted precisely because the depressed prices of the world market made it impossible for any factor in the sugar industry to operate at a profit.

Consumers were protected by the provisions of the bill under which the Secretary of Agriculture determines the amount of sugar to be consumed. He may raise his estimates if the price should get out of line. So successful has the operation been that the retail prices of sugar since the enactment of the Sugar Act have been lower than at any time in the history of the sugar industry.

If American consumers should again be obliged to depend for their sugar supply upon shipping facilities from off-shore areas and upon a refiner-controlled industry, they might expect to see again the prices which they paid during the last war. The average prices year by year during that crisis went up steadily from 9.3 cents per pound in 1917 to 19.4 cents in 1920.

Under the Sugar Act, despite the benefit payments to farmers of which Mr. Callaghan complains, the consumer has never paid more than 5.8 cents. These benefit payments are not a subsidy in any real sense of the word because they are paid out of the proceeds of a processing tax which is borne by the industry itself. The tax falls upon processors and growers, not upon the consumers, and amounts to a transfer of a portion of the excess profits of processing sugar from the processor to the farmer.

Without casting any burden upon the consumer, the Sugar Act has so reorganized the entire sugar industry that it has stabilized and improved conditions for every person engaged in it. It has been particularly successful in improving labor conditions upon the cane plantations in Hawaii and Puerto Rico where, until this law was adopted, sugar cane was raised under the substandard labor conditions that have notoriously existed in Cuba and San Domingo.

To argue as the Maritime Association of the Port of New York does that sugar beets should not be raised upon the family-sized farms of the 21 States now engaged in that industry, but that our sugar supply should be brought in from the Caribbean and Latin America, is merely to argue that for the benefit of the organized refining industry of New York City, the beet farmers of the United States should be driven from the industry and their place taken by the plantation exploited labor of areas which do not have our standards of social existence.

The Soldier's Stand

By Harold J. Laski

Views Of Young Britain

IN A RECENT American journal which arrived in London I noticed an indignant letter from one of its subscribers protesting against American aid to the "fox-hunting class in England." It is just two years since I last had the opportunity of visiting the United States and I had not known how widespread was the attitude of the correspondent I quote. But it is, I think, worth while to give Americans a series of extracts from letters I have received from serving soldiers. They make clear, at least, what some of the men in the fighting forces conceive to be the objects of this war.

LASKI

"Men in my company," writes a student officer in the Royal Army Service Corps, "were delighted at the overwhelming vote against a peace of accommodation with Hitler at the Labor Party conference. They are representative of almost everyone I meet in feeling that there are two jobs to do. There is the negative jobs of cleaning up fascism and there is the positive job of building a world with decent opportunities for the young. No government in Britain can survive which doesn't undertake those tasks."

My second letter is from a sergeant pilot now with a bomber command in the east of England. "What makes us go through with this job," he writes, "is the sense that we can't otherwise shape our own lives. Most of us would gladly fight any government which tried to do a Pétain trick on England."

I HAVE A LETTER from a young lieutenant promoted from the ranks in a famous regiment. "I used to think that ideas were at a discount in the army. To some extent they are still, among the older men. But those of us in our twenties are profoundly concerned about the shape of things to come. We are all for Churchill today because he means fight. But none of us, in my view, wants to go back to the prewar England or is prepared to do so."

My fourth extract is from a letter by a former pupil now in the Middle East. "Fighting makes you think what you are fighting for at intervals. When I was at school I called myself a Tory Democrat. Now I think I am a Socialist in the sense that most of the men here are Socialist—I mean that the cake must be divided justly among the community. I realize now that what was wrong in the 'appeasement' period was that it was ruled by the rentier mind. That's the thing we must get rid of if we are to keep the world at peace."

My last extract is from a man in an antiaircraft gun crew in a lonely part of Scotland. "I was grateful for the books. All these hours away from people makes us get to talk pretty freely. Two of my mates are young mechanics and one was a Hoover salesman. After the war we are all going to work for a cooperative world instead of a competitive one. Our lot is convinced that the old capitalist world is done. But we don't want to hack our way to a new order if we can help it."

NOW, OF COURSE, I agree that extracts from five letters are not a representative sample of an army of over 4,000,000 fighting man. I agree, too, that there are plenty of Englishmen who would disagree with my correspondents and to whom, indeed, preservation of the "fox-hunting" class may even appear a vital objective in this war. I am satisfied to point out that a leaven of thought is at work among our fighting men and that it is directed to the idea of a better social order. That better order may not come; a hope is capable of defeat no less than victory. I am concerned only to emphasize that the will to its emergence is there and that an effort by the "fox-hunting class" to frustrate it will have to be a pretty considerable one.

For the American whom I have quoted does not, I think, realize in any degree certain inescapable things. Total war is in and of itself a revolutionary act. It compels adjustments so immense in the national economy and habits of a people that it compels profound adaptations also in their thoughts. Millions of men and women live completely different lives. Thousands of them discover in things like the A. R. P. services a capacity for leadership they did not suspect themselves to possess. Public affairs drive, by their inherent drama, into the foreground of discussion. I do not pretend to certainty that the postwar world will be better than the prewar world. I do not pretend to confidence that it will be different.

YET I DO pretend that a postwar world in which we have defeated Hitler is bound to be a better world than the one that he dominates. I hold no brief for the "fox-hunting class" but I do assert with conviction that with all its limitations the kind of social order it sought to make in its heyday was a more decent and more tolerate kind of social order than that which Hitler and his like are seeking to impose.

The defects of rule by "gentlemen" are obvious enough. But those defects would, I suggest, be regarded as virtues by the Poles and Czechs who are now experiencing the "new order" of Hitler at first hand. It is evident enough that extension of that "new order" is not going to fulfill the dreams my soldier correspondents permit themselves. They are, most of them, pretty ordinary fellows; and it is worth pointing out that this is one country in Europe today in which ordinary people may indulge in the right to dream.

We in Britain may have made our mistakes. There are plenty of evil things in our historic record. It still remains a vital truth that if we are defeated our conqueror deprives a whole continent of the qualities that has given life its dignity and self-respect. That, I think, is understood by everyone who has come under the heel of Hitler; it is even suspected by most of his Quislings.

U.S. Closes Borders To Italy Nationals

Copyright by New York Times

The Treasury in conjunction with the Justice Department yesterday banned the departure of Italian nationals from the United States pending further instructions. This action, like a similar order last week applying to German nationals, was taken to insure compliance with President Roosevelt's executive order June 14 freezing all continental European funds here.

On Saturday all Italian consulates and other semiofficial agencies in the United States were ordered closed as had already been done with those of Germany.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said at his press conference yesterday that there had been no new discussions yet with Russia regarding her exemption from the freezing order now that she has been attacked by Germany.

Bill Cunningham's Column:

Inside German Army With Man Who Lived With It

By Bill Cunningham

I've read a lot of books and high-powered theses of one sort and another about the German military machine and how it operates and why, but I've met just one man who actually saw it doing business and who talked about it in language that I could understand. He had no theories. He knew nothing of strategy, major plans, principal strengths, nor possible weaknesses. He'd simply seen the soldiers themselves, had lived with them, talked with them and could report upon what they seemed to be as human beings.

He was a year ahead of me in school, went to France in the last war as a member of the A. E. F., and when it was over he married a French girl and remained in Paris. He's been there in business through all the years since. He was there when the Germans marched into Paris and for a considerable period thereafter.

He was in the produce business, an item that gave his conversation more point, because his source of supply was the farmers of northern, or what is now occupied, France, and he made frequent excursions into that district after the occupation in an effort to keep his supplies coming and his business alive. These proved futile and he finally had to fold up, but that's where and how he saw the German soldiers, often living for a week in the same farmhouses where they were billeted, and becoming familiar enough so that they were all calling each other by their first names.

A Most Military Army

He says it's the finest, best disciplined and best conditioned army he ever saw in his life. A most military army, with every soldier keeping his buttons polished and so meticulous about his looks and his bearing that they don't even smoke on the streets while in uniform.

Those billeted on the farms, with whom he became very friendly, were all pretty sick of the business, he said. There was no suggestion of disloyalty or rebellion. They were just sore because the war was stalemated, or because at least England hadn't quit or wouldn't quit. They were willing and prepared to go on fighting, but they wanted to get it over with so they could quit and go home. A furlough was the big break they all were fishing for. Some of those he talked with had been in the field ever since the Nazis moved into Austria.

Most of them were young, and the Germans told him they don't use anybody at the front who is over 25. Behind every one of these, however, there are a dozen men in the lines of supply ranging gradually upward in age to 35. He said there wasn't a fat man in the entire German army, that they all looked like college football players in the middle of a season.

One noticeable thing, however, was that they didn't seem to have a great deal of physical strength, and when one of them sustained a superficial scratch or cut of some sort, it took ten days or two weeks to heal. He ascribed this to years of poor diet and ersatz fodder. He said, for his money, they were living largely on their nerve. Still they were completely sold upon the idea that they had to and would destroy England.

They were pretty well supplied with beef and canned goods from Germany, and traded him some which his family needed badly in Paris for some eggs and butter he'd been able to scrape up from his farmer friends. They also gave him some bottles of almost priceless wine they claimed to have found abandoned as they came through the district.

Motorized Efficiency

He said he stood by a crossroads all one day and watched the panzer divisions moving into Paris. He had previously heard that the German rolling stock was a lot of junk, he said, but he never saw finer motorized material even in our own Army. The German soldiers explained some of the efficiency. For instance, there are five things about a motor car that are likely to break down first. He'd forgotten them, and I don't know them, but one is that little glass bell over the carburetor, another is the self-starter, and the others are little pins and parts.

Well, every motorized German unit carries these things as spare parts. Every twenty-fifth vehicle in the line on a motorized move is a complete repair truck carrying a full crew of expert mechanics, all tools and spare parts. If a car, truck or tank breaks down, it is simply shoved to the side of the road as the column moves on, and the first repair crew to reach it takes over. When the repairs have been made, it falls into line at a place comparable to the one it occupied originally and moves on.

Although strictly agin' 'em both as a votary of democracy and as a business victim of their aggression, my friend says he honestly didn't hear of even one case of an abused French civilian. He said the soldiers weren't overbearing nor brutal. They were plainly bosses of the situation, there was no question about that, but the commonality of the soldiers weren't taking any advantage of the fact.

Of the French, he said, the men are thoroughly whipped, but the spirit of the women may bring that nation back fighting.

Ghosts of Blaine Mansion Hunt Other Halls To Haunt; LaGuardia And Staff Move In

By Richard Oulahan, 3d

The ghosts of the old Blaine mansion, 2000 Massachusetts Avenue, must have been shocked yesterday when Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and his bustling staff moved into the old house and set up headquarters for the Civilian Defense Office there.

No more incongruous setting in Washington could be imagined for the tireless, never-stopping LaGuardia and his equally indefatigable assistants. Where once the flower of Washington's aristocracy lived in leisurely grandeur, now the Little Flower from New York's East Side sets a breathless pace for his staff of 100, which crams the building from the fourth-floor former billiard room to the basement.

On the Massachusetts Avenue side, the red brick mansion looks much as it must have looked in the Nineties. But shining limousines instead of carriages drive up under the vine-covered portico, and most of the cars are stamped with official seals instead of the crests of Washington's first families; the visitors are more apt to be Government leaders than dowagers and debutantes.

At the back of the house, an orange-colored grocery store is superimposed on the mansion's facade, but, even so, the old house retains an air of dignity. Inside the residence, one is apt to run into a scene reminiscent of Bedlam Asylum rather than a Southern mansion. In the marble hall a corps of policemen and chauffeurs hold forth; in the reception hall and the half-dozen drawing rooms, libraries and anterooms where debutantes and statesmen once dined and danced, secretaries now pound their typewriters, officials confer and telephones ring incessantly.

The crystal chandeliers have been replaced with goose-necked lamps, the hardwood floors are covered with linoleum and green carpeting, the center halls have been partitioned off, the picture frames over the fireplaces hold calendars and electric fans, and the panelled walls are painted over. But, even so, the old fashioned baronial splendor still shines through. Most of the changes were wrought by the previous tenants of the Blaine mansion, the Rural Electrification Administration, which moved to the modernistic Longfellow Building, Connecticut and Rhode Island Avenues, last winter.

In the latter part of the ninefeenth century, James G. Blaine, famed Senator and Secretary of State who was defeated for the Presidency by Grover Cleveland, built the ornate mansion. When the house was built, opposite the old Chinese Embassy, it marked the outermost limit of the city, with all land beyond being open country. Later, when the Blaine mansion was occupied by George Westinghouse, the neighborhood became the most exclusive in Washington, and remained so until recent years.

The squat, vigorous little mayor commutes to Washington, by airplane, arriving here at 10 a. m. Tuesday, and working tirelessly until Thursday or Friday night, when he returns to New York. In addition to his work as director of the Civilian Defense Office, LaGuardia carries on his duties as head of the Permanent Joint Committee on Defense with Canada, president of the United States Conference of Mayors, and mayor of the world's largest city—all at the same time!

LaGuardia's sumptuous office, on the second floor of the old residence, was either an upstairs sitting room or the master bedroom of the Blaine house. From his desk, the mayor keeps up a steady stream of business, often dictating for hours on end to his famous "relay" team of three stenographers, conferring with his staff, meeting appointments, never stopping for lunch, working until after nightfall. "When the mayor is here," an employe said yesterday, "the place hums." No one goes out for lunch during LaGuardia's four days in town, and the mayor can't even stop for a midday meal at his desk.

The other officers are equally busy. From a former bedroom, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward and Lieut. Comdr. S. J. Singer, designees of the Navy Department to the Defense Office, carry on.

Floor Exercises Will Improve Round Shoulders, Wobbly Hips

By Ida Jean Kain

A WOMAN almost has to be a detective to put her finger on the exact trouble with her own figure. A group of wide awake Philadelphia women past 40 have written to insist that their chief grievances are: Not sway back but a protruding hipline, and not a dowager's hump, but rounded shoulders.

Anyone who has rounded shoulders but has managed to escape a dowager's hump and sway back is to be congratulated. It is practically impossible to make a habit of rounding the shoulders forward without letting the head poke forward and the small of the back cave in. That is a law of balance.

Here is a fairly accurate "lie detector" test for figure alignment. Stand with the back flattened against the wall. Make an effort to press the shoulders, back of neck, small of back, and back of hips closely against the wall. Standing in that position, reach back with one hand and, holding it flat, try to insert it in the hollow at the small of the back. If you can do that easily, the chances are that the incurve is pronounced—that you have sway back. If you find it difficult, your back is either fairly straight or well padded.

Nature Lacks Style Sense

Speaking of padding, let's take that on the hipline. Nature is notoriously lacking in style sense. She decrees upholstery where it is needed and, since we sit so much of the time, the hipbones are apt to be the best upholstered portion of the figure. A general reduction in weight, coupled with more activity, would tend to slim this measurement.

But you want specific measures which will get results quickly.

To correct rounded shoulders, make a practice of resting on the back on the floor for a few minutes each day with a folded towel directly under the outcurve of the shoulders. Flex the knees and place feet on floor near hips. While you are resting, dig the small of the back into the floor several times. That will stretch your entire spine and promote better alignment.

Arm Circling Helps

Whenever you think of it during the day, stand up and stretch and swing your arms up, back around and down in wide circles from the shoulders. Backward arm circling is one of the best of all measures for straightening rounded shoulders.

To reduce a too-pronounced derriere, take up rolling. Sit on the floor with knees flexed and feet held off floor close to buttocks. Then lean back on the floor until you are in a semireclining position with weight supported on forearms at either side. Roll from one side to the other, 25 times.

This brings all your weight to bear on the hipline at the back. At the same time, it is not a strenuous exercise. After you have become accustomed to it, you can increase it to 100 counts.

Holding the feet off the floor makes it easier to put pressure on the hipline, but it also strengthens the lower abdominal muscles.

After you have completed this stint, rest, then lie full length on the back on the floor, with arms stretched overhead on floor, legs straight down, and roll across the back from side to side. A straight roll of this kind is not as specific, but that means it takes in more territory. Roll 25 times, and increase.

Girl Who Has Made Mistake Isn't Required to Tell Her Sad Story to Every Admirer, Says Correspondent Who Places High Value on Honesty and Courage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Those two righteous-sounding correspondents whose letters you published last Wednesday must certainly have led perfect lives to be so quick in condemning the fiancee of the young man whom you advised in your column of June 13. All their sympathy is with the young man (who is having difficulty recovering from the shock of hearing from his fiancee the story of an earlier, illicit love affair). What about the girl? Do you think it was easy for her to tell that story? I think you answered the young man's letter, and their objections, perfectly. But may I add a few thoughts on the subject?

Regarding the girl's "eleventh hour confession," is a girl to tell every man she meets of her mistakes? A girl who has been in love or engaged once, and has had it turn out badly, is going to be more cautious in reposing her trust thereafter. And I beg to differ with "M. A. B.'s" statement that "it is generally accepted that woman's biological urge is less strong than man's." That is an old wives' tale, as all enlightened persons now know. There are robust as well as anemic temperaments in both the feminine and masculine classifications of humanity—and it happens to be a fortuitously individual matter of possessing either a high or low degree of the life force.

Your correspondents' principal argument in favor of chastity seems to be that it enhances a girl's value, matrimonially speaking. One could wish they had carried the case to higher ground. A girl who remains chaste for essentially calculating reasons, and not because she prizes virtue for its own sake, would seem to me to deserve little credit on the moral side of the ledger. Motives weigh heavily in the scales of divine justice, and the basic honesty of character which compelled the girl in this case to "confess" her past mistake must be reckoned in her favor when appraising her moral worth. Too many persons seem to overlook the fact that virtue and virginity are not necessarily synonymous.

Lurking in the minds of these worried people is the anticipation of a relapse into error on the part of one who has once "sinned," I suppose. But let us consider, on the one hand, that the burnt child dreads the fire, and, on the other hand, that nothing is deader than a dead-and-gone romance. Or, to be completely realistic and cynical, let's admit that the temptation one yields to is not nearly so provocative in retrospect as the temptation tensely resisted. Thus, after marriage, a woman would be definitely less interested in a discarded lover than she might be in an old beau whose attentions had been almost, but not quite, irresistible.

We all know there are penalties, emotional and social, implicit in illicit love affairs—and I don't condone promiscuity. But a mistake, honestly evaluated and avowed as such, is one thing, and calloused moral laxity something else again. Persons of the latter stripe never feel any need, much less compulsion, to "confess" their intrigues.

In my opinion, this girl has been severely penalized, twice over—in men's abuse of her misplaced confidence—for the essentially fine qualities of honesty, generosity and ingenuousness which she brings to the experience of love. It is unfortunately true of most of us that in our discussions of sexual morality we say what we think we ought to, and not what we really believe, or what our own experiences have taught us.

Thinks Dejected Youth 'Cuts Contemptible Figure'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One of your readers celebrated her twelfth wedding anniversary last week by writing you a letter (published June 18 over the signature "L. P. E.") in which she criticized your answer (of June 13) to a heartsick young man. Well, I am herewith celebrating my thirteenth wedding anniversary by saying that I thought your handling of his problem was superb, and that your reply to "L. P. E." (and also "M. A. B.") was a masterpiece. The self-pitying young man cuts a contemptible figure beside his courageous fiancee, who has learned to face the responsibility of her own acts—which is the acid test of character. Sincerely yours,

ROBERT D. F.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Put Brush Near Bathtub

Lack of tools, rather than carelessness is often the reason that people leave the "ring around the bathtub." Try hanging a long-handled brush near the tub, and have an adequate supply of soap handy so that each bather may easily wash out the tub. The brush should be given a separate soap-and-water cleansing and dried in the sun at least once a week.

Foot Care Vital To Summer Hiker

The wise hiker remembers before she starts out that it is her feet that are going to carry the load, and she prepares them for it. Foot care, before and after a hike, is exceedingly important, especially for the first hike of the season. The experienced hiker starts out with clean well bathed feet, for one thing. Then he dons clean, fresh socks or stockings, preferably woolen ones. Many people have found it helpful to rub a little soap on the inside of the sock at the heel, where the shoes will rub against it. Finally, she wears sturdy, sensible shoes.

At the end of the day's hike the feet should receive extra careful attention. Remove the shoes and stockings, bathe the feet thoroughly in warm soapy water, then plunge them into cool water to which a small quantity of epsom salts has been added and let them soak for 15 minutes. Bathe the feet a second time in warm suds, rinse, and dry thoroughly with a clean towel.

Apply witch hazel or rubbing alcohol, and dust lightly with talcum powder. Unless it is time to go to bed put on clean hose, and a different pair of shoes from those worn on the hike.

"I could never do that!" you may think as you watch the wizard skill with which an illustrator draws. But are you so sure you couldn't? In advertising art and in illustration, as in any art, it's part talent and part training.

Home study with charts and diagrams could give your talents a chance. One of the first things you learn is the trick of seeing the body in simple geometric forms.

Drawing a leg, for instance, you see it in three sections. 1—The thigh down to the knee, which you sketch with two slightly tapering, almost parallel lines. 2—the gradually widening part from the knee to the fullest part of the calf. 3—The tapering lines of the long descent from calf to ankle.

Drawing the head, body and arms goes smoothly, too, when you learn their basic forms. Then you learn to fill in details of ture and clothing, to add light and shade to give your figure roundness. When you start grouping your figures to tell a story, you're on the road to becoming a real illustrator.

Senator and Mrs. Pepper Hosts At Dinner for Col. James Flanagan

Former Texan Now Living Near Toronto Also Guest at Luncheon at Capitol

By Hope Ridings Miller

JUST BEFORE settling into its traditional summertime doldrums, the Capital calendar is having its final fling of the season by way of an all-out round of parties for Col. James W. Flanagan, former Texan, who now lives near Toronto, Canada.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Time and time again, traveling Washingtonians have returned to town aglow with memories of good times at Divadale, Col. Flanagan's Canadian estate. And now that Col. Flanagan is in town for a few days he is being made the center of such a swirl of parties as I have never seen in June's-end Washington.

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, who visited at Divadale a few months ago, entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Col. Flanagan. Yesterday the visitor met a number of Senators at a luncheon Senator Pepper gave for him at the Capitol. Half a dozen other parties were being planned for Col. Flanagan, when he let it be known that he wanted a bit of free time during the remainder of his visit. But there will be more fetes for him anyway, if he extends his stay and gives way to the wishes of his many friends here.

A sizable number of diplomats and officials gathered at the dinner Senator and Mrs. Pepper gave for him last night.

Originally planned to take place on the Shoreham Terrace the party was moved into the Blue Room by special arrangement with the weather man. The company first gathered informally in the cocktail lounge and then moved across the hall to the ballroom, where covers were laid at a U-shaped table.

Mrs. Pepper was gowned in pale blue chiffon, fashioned with a brown shadow-lace bodice and short sleeves.

The Canadian Minister, Leighton McCarthy, and the Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey, had a long chat with the guest of honor, and while I wasn't close enough to listen in, I'm sure I know at least one subject they discussed. Also joining that group for part of their talk was Chauncey J. Hamlin, president of the Buffalo Museum of Science, who was another having a full share of the spotlight at last night's dinner. Here for a very short stay, Mr. Hamlin is registered at the Willard Hotel. He plans to be off in a few weeks for an extended trip to Brazil.

Measles Keep Mrs. Casey Away

Mrs. Richard Casey had planned to come to the dinner, but measles (no respecter of personages) put in a prior claim to her time shortly before the party.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins (the latter in navy blue lace and chiffon set off with a matching mantilla), and the Colombian Ambassador, Gabriel Turbay, were ranking guests at the dinner. Ambassador Turbay, by the way, came in for considerable attention from the guest of honor, who has spent several months recently traveling in South and Central America.

Others there included Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, she in pale pink chiffon; Representative and Mrs. Fritz Lanham, who have visited Col. Flanagan at his Canadian home; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, she in Nile green crepe fashioned on draped lines; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. Clarence Lee Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Miller, and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Miller, Miss Pauletta Guffey and Clyde Webster, brother of the hostess, who is here from St. Petersburg, Fla., for several days.

Although a business engagement prevented Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones from attending the dinner, and Mrs. Jones wouldn't go along without him ("I reckon I'm old-fashioned about some things, but I just don't like to go places in the evening without my husband," she said), the two did drop in to join the company after dinner.

"Can't pass up any opportunity to see Col. Flanagan as often as possible," said Secretary Jones as he and his wife arrived to join the pleasant party.

Secretary and Mrs. Jones Start Round of Fetes

The Secretary and Mrs. Jones had started the visitor's calendar with a dinner on the Shoreham Terrace Saturday night. The fete had to be arranged on the spur of the moment, as nobody seemed to know exactly when Col. Flanagan was to arrive from New York where he had been for several days. But he did get here in time for dinner, and the party, nicely accented with Capitalites, went merrily along as scheduled.

Among those present, in addition to Senator and Mrs. Pepper, were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones, Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Will Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson and John P. Bickel, Col. Flanagan's close friend, who also hails from Toronto. Mr. Bickel has been in London for several months as special assistant to Lord Beaverbrook, the famous Canadian who became one of England's best-known newspaper publishers and has been serving as chief of aircraft production. Stopping off in Washington for a few hours to consult with several top-flight officials, Mr. Bickel left early Sunday for his home in Toronto.

Accompanied by her 6-year-old son, Michael, Mrs. Joel C. Hudson (above) will leave in a few days for Isle La Motte, Vt., to spend the remainder of the summer. About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Patterson—she was Marvin Breckenridge, the photographer and radio commentator—are enjoying a placid Maryland interlude between tours of duty in Berlin. They are at their farm in St. Leonards, on the Patuxent River, for a brief visit during Mr. Patterson's leave from his post at our Embassy in Germany. They have been in California for several weeks.

Mrs. Patterson

Mrs. Patterson was describing some phases of her life in Berlin yesterday. For the past year she has been studying at Berlin University, working at German until now she says she can hold her own in a conversation. She also took a course in that famous German culture, studying drama, architecture, and so forth. Two other women from the Embassy circle enrolled in the course with her, and she says they were practically the only Americans at the university.

"The Germans are always polite to us," says Marvin Breckenridge. "In shops and on the street we never felt they resented Americans. Perhaps they're more impersonal about these things than we are in the United States."

ANTI-AIRCRAFT splinters fell in the garden of the Pattersons' home in Berlin during one of the British raids. But so far their property has escaped bombs. The Pattersons have a comfortable air raid shelter in their cellar, but Marvin says they prefer to weather the raids upstairs.

Mrs. Patterson's travel photographs formerly appeared in many magazines, but now it is her husband who takes all the pictures. He brought a whole collection back from Berlin.

"I've more or less given up photography for the present," says Mrs. Patterson, "as it's practically impossible to send any pictures through the censorship."

THE PATTERSONS will linger on at their farm through the week and will then go to York Harbor, Me., to visit her parents. As her mother and father were unable to give her a wedding—she was married in Berlin during the war—they will hold a large reception in honor of the Pattersons on July 5. Now staying with the diplomat and his wife is her brother, Charles Breckenridge, New York lawyer, who is working here until August 1.

THE JOHN FARR SIMMONSES, of our Legation in Canada, will shortly leave for his new post, Rio de Janeiro. Jack Simmons has just been named Counselor of the American Embassy there and Consul General. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have been in Canada ever since their marriage here about five years ago, and both have become ardent ski enthusiasts. Mrs. Simmons is the former Caroline Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Houston Thompson, of Washington. Her mother will return from a trip to Colorado in time to see Mr. and Mrs. Simmons before they go to South America.

ODDS AND ENDS: An American, after lunching with Air Chief Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill the other day, says he's feeling optimistic again for the first time in weeks. Sir Frederick has just arrived from England . . . Mrs. Robert Scotten left by plane yesterday for the Dominican Republic after vacationing here. She will return in October, this time with her husband, the American Minister. At a recent cocktail party Mrs Scotten wore a tiny crystal watch tied to her bracelet.

Concert to Open Pan American Series Tonight

At 9 tonight the esplanade of the Pan American Union, with its tall poplar trees that fringe the garden, becomes the scene of the first of the series of summer concerts presented annually by the Pan American Union.

The Army Band, with Capt. Thomas F. Darcey leading, will give the program and the assisting artist will be Senor Francisco Naya, Cuban tenor, who made his American debut last fall with the San Francisco Opera Company as the duke in Rigoletto. He later appeared with the Chicago Opera Company and made an enviable record both here and abroad for his operatic performances, concert recitals and radio appearances.

The concert will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co. network to listeners in North America and by short-wave transmission to the Pan American countries.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, and host of the evening, will say a word of greeting to the radio audiences in North and South America as well as a word of welcome to the delegates to the American Guild of Organists of the United States and Canada who are meeting in Washington.

The number of acceptances being received indicate that the gathering will be one of the largest and most representative of the diplomatic, musical and social circles of Washington.

Mrs. Uline Hill, Daughter, Give Party

Serving mint juleps on the pleasant terrace of their Ellicott Street home, Mrs. Uline Hill and her daughter, Miss Patricia Hill, entertained at a party last evening at 7. The guests were a mingling of youngsters and oldsters. Following the party guests went to the opening of the "Water Follies" at the Uline Arena.

Mrs. Hill and her daughter have taken a cottage at Provincetown, Mass., for the month of August, and Patricia plans to study portrait painting with Henry Hensche on picturesque Cape Cod. Next month Miss Hill will be a member of a house party which Miss Betty Ann Swaggart will give at her parents' cottage in Cape May, N. J.

Among the guests at last evening's party were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newton Dunn, of England; Mr. and Mrs. Allan J. Krebs, Mrs. Richard Hutchison, Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison, Richard Hutchison, Nathan Bartlett, Judge George Neilson, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hammonds, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clagett, Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Sherry Biggers, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Miss Emily Myers, Baron and Baroness Seidler, Capt. Fred Roy, William Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Soutter, Mrs. Frank Kelly, Princess Cantacuzene, Miss Ruth Hamilton, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brisson Norris, Jack Logan, William C. Shelton, Logan Owen, Dr. William Howards, Waverly Taylor and Barry Woods.

Julia Upson Married Here

The marriage of Miss Julia Ann Upson and Frank MacIvor Conway took place yesterday afternoon at 4 in the Church of the Covenant, with the Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Upson, of Ann Arbor, Mich. Mr. Conway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Conway, of West New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y.

The bride wore a white dotted Swiss frock with a train. Her tulle veil was finger-tip length and she carried a colonial bouquet of white flowers. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Nancy Upson. Robert L. Conway was best man for his brother and ushers were Francis Carney, of St. James School, Md., and Richard Ludwig, of Pennsylvania.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's great aunt, Miss Julia F. Upson, and her cousin, Miss Julia F. Fiebeger, at the latter's home on Nineteenth Street. Mrs. Upson, who received with the young couple, wore a beige chiffon frock and white hat. Mrs. Conway wore an embroidered pink chiffon with a large white hat.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of Michigan. Mr. Conway is a chemical engineeer and is connected with the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. The young couple will live in Swedesboro, N. J.

Miss Lois Scarbrough Engaged to Mr. Bixby

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Scarbrough of Bridgeport, Nebr., announce the engagement of their daughter, Lois, to Howard M. Bixby, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Bixby of Washington.

Mr. Bixby is a graduate of Maryland University and for several years has been employed in the Nebraska State Highway Department. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Miss Rita Gallagher Will Be Wed to Officer

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Gallagher announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Rita Marie Gallagher, to Lieut. Robert Goskirk Carnahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Carnahan, of this city.

The wedding will take place Saturday in Chattanooga, Tenn., where Lieut. Carnahan is stationed.

2 New Names Put on Season's Debutante List

Two new prospective debutantes have added their names to the list which is growing slowly but surely in spite of the state of "emergency."

The plans of Miss Theodora Chandler—a pretty youngster who is named for her father, Commander Theodore E. Chandler—are contingent on the "state of the world" so to speak, for the family may be shipped off on a moment's notice. However, if they are here in the fall, she plans to be presented by her parents at a series of small parties.

Miss Evelyn Dixon Dillard, however, has made definite plans for a debut dance at Christmas which will be given by her mother, Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, of Alexandria, Va. They make their home in one of the most interesting houses in Alexandria. It is called a "flounder house" and there are but a few in the country.

Mrs. Keyes Plans Party

A party will be given by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes in honor of the two debutantes on Saturday from 5 o'clock "onwards" at Mrs. Keyes' Alexandria home—Tradition. Primarily a younger set party, the hostess has asked a company of about 75.

Mrs. Keyes returned only a few weeks ago from San Antonio, Tex., where she conducted a writing course at Our Lady of the Lake College for six weeks. She had hardly set foot in Alexandria before she was off for Maine where she made a speech.

All Washington is awaiting the appearance of Mrs. Keyes' book, which is due to be finished by August 1. At present, now that she is back in her home, Mrs. Keyes is putting the finishing touches on her novel which has a Washington setting.

Vacation Trips In the Offing

For both debutantes the party on Saturday should be their summer swan song for they will be off shortly afterwards on vacation trips. Miss Chandler, who was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary this month, will go to New Hampshire to visit her grandparents, Admiral and Mrs. Lloyd Chandler. The Chandlers, incidentally, are among the first families of New Hampshire.

Miss Dillard, who was graduated from Chatham Hall in Virginia this year, will be off soon to Camp Norwood, also in Virginia, where she will serve as a counselor. Miss Dillard plans to combine her debutante festivities next season with schoolwork for she will enroll as a freshman at Sweet Briar in the autumn.

Ernest Draper's Plan Vacation Trip to Maine

Ernest G. Draper, a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and Mrs. Draper will leave shortly for a three weeks vacation at Northeast Harbor near Mount Desert, Me.

Mrs. Draper has just returned from Noroton, Conn., where last Friday she attended the wedding of her niece Miss Shelia Crimmins and Ensign Orrin Boice. Miss Crimmins is well known here where she often visited the Drapers.

Miss Mary Draper, daughter of Mr. Draper, is now on an educational trip, with a group of Vassar students, and plans to visit Washington sometime this summer.

Engaged

MISS ARIAN O'BRIEN

whose engagement to Alfred W. Gerdes, of California and New York, is announced by her brother, Lieut. Robert Lee O'Brien, jr. The wedding will take place this summer. Miss O'Brien is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee O'Brien, of Washington

W. G. McConnels On Honeymoon: Will Live in Baltimore

Mr. and Mrs. William George McConnel are on a motor trip following their marriage and will be at home after July 1 in Baltimore, Md. The wedding of the former Miss Jessie Warren Peacock, formerly of Washington, took place on Saturday, June 14, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Peacock, in Roper, N. C. The Rev. Matthew Gardner officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white chiffon dress and her veil was held by a coronet of gardenias. She carried a bouquet of orchids. Miss Elizabeth Allen wore a blue organdie gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Fred McConnel, of Emporia, Va., was best man for his brother, and Maurice Peacock, brother of the bride, was an usher.

Large Party Given at Club By Mrs. Rand

One of the coolest spots in Washington these days seems to be the breeze-swept dining room of the Army-Navy Club which, even without benefit of air-conditioning, still seems to maintain a resort atmosphere. Yesterday at luncheon time, the room was filled with parties, and in many instances guests lingered on until mid-afternoon to enjoy the cool setting.

One of the largest luncheons on the calendar there was given by Mrs. Oscar R. Rand, wife of Lieut. Col. Rand, who entertained in honor of Mrs. Edgar Jarman, wife of Col. Jarman, and Mrs. Carl F. Arnold, who recently returned from Laramie, Wyo., to make her home here. Dr. Arnold, formerly dean of the law school, University of Wyoming, is now with the Maritime Commission.

Mrs. Arnold is known professionally as Olga Moore, author of a number of short stories and one book, "Into The Wind," and several of the other guests also are writers. Mrs. C. E. Wise (Evelyn Voss Wise) came over from her home, Clynmalira, near Baltimore, especially for the party. The author of three novels already published, Mrs. Wise recently wrote the final line of her fourth, "Wheels in The Timber," and is now working on her fifth. All are set in Minnesota, where she spent her early years. Mrs. Wise is a sister of Mrs. Lyle Wilson.

Also among those present was Miss Mary Badger Wilson, author of "The Painted City," and a number of other books, and Mrs. J. E. Schwab, whose articles have been published in a number of magazines.

Others there included Mrs. Tom H. Barratt, sister of Mrs. Arnold; Mrs. J. C. Hauck, Mrs. D. M. Keith, Mrs. Ralph Erskine, Mrs. E. M. Brannon, Mrs. A. L. Lerch and Mrs. W. P. Funck.

Vera Kane Engaged To N. G. Hough, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Kane have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Vera Margaret Kane, to Norman Granville Hough, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Hough, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss Kane is a graduate of Wilson Teacher's College where she was a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma, a professional sorority. Her fiance was graduated from Denison University in Granville, Ohio, where he was affiliated with Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

Clubwomen Install New President

Mrs. Watkins Tells Federation to Shun Hysteria in Crisis; Chairmen Named

By Lucia Giddens

Clubwomen were challenged to "attend to their own knitting"—the federation's comprehensive program of defense—and to avoid hysteria and spectacular gestures in the present emergency, by Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins yesterday as she assumed the presidency of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

At the federation's last meeting of the season, Mrs. Watkins was installed to succeed Mrs Ernest Humphrey Daniel.

"When war stalks over the world, carrying many emotional and even intelligent minds by storm, our department of international relations should prove one of our most active and fruitful agencies for helping us keep our feet on solid ground," Mrs. Watkins said in the first message of her administration.

The same department, she said, would help prepare clubwomen to be useful "in efforts that the nations may make for solving their differences by peaceful means—the only way they can ever be solved—with an intelligent consideration of the foreign policies of our State Department and of any peace proposals that are being suggested or may be offered later."

Mrs. Robert Bates yesterday was named chairman of the department of international relations. Mrs. Percy Balch was appointed chairman of the division of peace proposals.

Other chairmen of departments and divisions, announced by Mrs. Watkins at the meeting at Hotel 2400, were:

American citizenship, Mrs. Tilman B. Parks; division of Americanization, Mrs. Hazel E. Brown; patriotism and flag, Mrs. Edward C. Shields; law observance, Etta L. Taggart.

American home, Mrs. James G. Osborne; division of family finance, Mrs. Martha Kirby; division of homemaking, Mrs. Edgar Brow; mothercraft, Mrs. G. G. Sward.

Education, Mrs. O. G. Hawkins; division of library service, Miss Mary E. Downey; public instruction, Mrs. F. S. Milkern; motion pictures, Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse; radio, Mrs. Gladys Middlemiss; committee on recreation, Mrs. William H. Hessick, jr.

Fine arts, Mrs. J. H. Underwood; division of arts, Mrs. Walter Miles; literature, Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist; committee on Bible, Mrs. Mabel Winkelhaus; division of music, Mrs. Marie C. Deal; poetry, Mrs. Harry Gutridge.

Club extension, Mrs. Frank M. Stuart; division of senior club women, Mrs. Lee D. Ritter; junior club women, Mrs. Richard Meadows

Legislation, Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson; under the division of laws before Congress, committee on civil service, Mrs. C. H. J. Miller; committee on taxation, Mrs. Helene M. McEvoy.

Public welfare, Mrs. Bertha Jones, division of child welfare, Mrs. Morgan Otterbach; community service, Mrs. Ruth Mayberry; correction, Mrs. Wilma Souder; industry, Mrs. Alfred Fleming; public health, Mrs. William W. Sault; police and fire control, Mrs. Harmon Chapman; committee on humane work in the District, Mrs. LeVerne Beales.

The following chairmen of standing committees were announced: Budget and finance, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser; hospitality, Mrs. Ivan H. Simms; place of meeting, Mrs. William M. Collins; yearbook, Mrs. Charles H. Pierce; spiritual guidance, Mrs. Ellis Logan.

Mrs. Daniel, retiring president, will be director to the General Federation. Mrs. Thomas H. Faris, who has been chairman of press and publicity for the outgoing administration, will continue to serve until a new chairman is appointed.

Ray Morgan, news commentator, spoke on "The News and How it is Gathered and Broadcast" at yesterday's session. Delegates to the General Federation convention recently in Atlantic City made their reports. After lunch, Mrs. Faber Stevenson traced the history of the District Federation.

In her message Mrs. Watkins stressed that the District Federation's program is a "plan of community and national defense."

What is needed now, she said, is "an intelligent careful attending to our knitting, avoiding hysteria, loss of motion, overlapping of efforts, duplication of organization, and a willingness to leave to other groups work on subjects they are peculiarly well prepared to do better than we," Mrs. Watkins said.

Girl Scout Camp May Flather Plans Home Defense Studies

Health, safety and conservation of food will be among the courses taught to Girl Scouts at Camp May Flather this season in its home defense and citizenship training program, it was announced yesterday.

The camp of the Washington Girl Scout organization, near Harrisonburg, Va., will open Sunday, Mrs. Joel F. Watson, chairman of the camp committee, announced.

"Based on the actual experience of Girl Guides in England," Mrs. Watson stated, "the committee has prepared a program which will emphasize the value of camp experience in preparing young people for citizenship and home defense.

"Realizing that national health is a cornerstone of national defense," she said, "Camp May Flather will, for the second year, be used as a station for a study of health and safety in camps, under the direction of Dr. Margaret Lewis. This work is being carried on as a grant from the Children's Foundation in New York.

"Gardening and canning over an outdoor cooking unit will be under the direction of Miss Mary Belk, of Winthrop College, Van Wyck, S. C. The saving and use of food as part of the national conservation project will be included in this activity.

"Mapping, signaling, fire prevention, fire combating, and first aid as applied to the out-of-doors will be emphasized.

"Conservation of natural resources," Mrs. Watson said, "will be carried on under the direction of George Cramer, of the Department of Agriculture, who for the last three years, has used the Scouts to help eradicate the blister rust from the white pine forests of the George Washington National Forest in which the camp is located."

Members appointed to the staff include Miss Catherine Connelly, head nurse, a specialist in communicable diseases and pedriatics at the Boston City Hospital, and Miss Alice Blalke, waterfront director, a Red Cross swimming instructor from Winthrop College, Darlington, S. C.

Among the head counselors is Miss Mary Rollins, local Girl Scout director of Huntington, W. Va., an expert in mountain dances, who assisted at Camp May Flather last year.

Others include Miss Evelyn Nicholson, South Portland, Me.; Miss Helen Sheets, Brookhaven, Miss.; Miss Carrie Pierson, Philadelphia, and Miss Eliza Critchlon, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Coming from the Canal Zone as an assistant counselor is Miss Mary Louise Traeger, Miss Mary Mathes, daughter of Mrs. Yorik Mathes, vice president of the P.-T. A. and a member of the camp committee. Miss Constance Hagen and Miss Evelyn Fulks also will serve as assistant counselors.

AN HISTORICAL PILGRIMAGE which many clubwomen will follow optically next winter, reached Washington a few days ago.

Mrs. A. W. Witt, known as "Ann Hayes" on a regular radio program for women in Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. L. E. Roberts, traveler and lecturer, of Gardner, Kans., passed the weekend in Washington making colored motion pictures.

Next winter they will collaborate in presenting an illustrated lecture on the pilgrimage to women's clubs in Kansas City. Mrs. Roberts will do the speaking, giving the program without charge, as a contribution to Americanism. The clubs will collect the admission fees for their various projects.

Traveling in a car with a chauffeur, Mrs. Witt and Mrs. Roberts were accompanied by the latter's five-year-old Pekingnese, probably a canine pioneer in making an historical pilgrimage.

They have visited the spots associated with Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., thence to Valley Forge and Philadelphia, and went on to Richmond and Williamsburg from here.

On her radio program, five times a week over KCMO, Mrs. Witt includes frequent interviews with presidents of women's clubs—as a way of letting each other (and the public) know about their projects. She asks them questions about how they raise money for these causes. Sometimes overlapping of projects is prevented because her program turns out to be a clearing house.

At present Mrs. Witt is stressing nutrition on her programs. She thinks too many American women are so interested in the decorative appearance of their meals that they do not pay enough attention to the nutritive value.

During the last war she promoted a demonstration kitchen in Kansas City where luncheons were served to teach conservation principles. She worked in cooperation with Herbert Hoover's conservation program.

Mrs. Witt speaks in person at least once a week to women's clubs. One of her favorite topics is how the clubwoman can be efficient in both home and club life, and balance the two, and she was one of the organizers of the Parent-Teacher movement more than 25 years ago.

South's Mine Owners Put Off Contract

A repetition of the defense-crippling coal stoppage appeared as a possibility last night as Southern coal operators repeatedly requested postponements before giving an answer to the "final word" of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. United Mine Workers' president, on a proposed two-year contract.

The Southerners were scheduled to make their reply at 8 p. m., and a conference of the U. M. W. policy committee, presumably to consider the answer, was set at 8:30. However, the 8 o'clock meeting was postponed until 10 a. m. today.

Although both sides declined comment, it was believed that the Southerners had offered a contract similar in all respects to that proposed by the National Defense Mediation Board, which considered the dispute following the 30-day stoppage in both Northern and Southern Appalachian districts during April.

Lewis, however, is reported to be insisting on a contract with the Southerners identical with that his union signed recently with Northern operators.

The principal distinctions between the Mediation Board proposals and the Northern contract lie in provisions in the latter giving the union a vacation period and the right to declare a Nation-wide strike.

No longer in dispute, however, is the controversial 40-cent-a-day differential between Northern and Southern day wages which precipitated the 30-day stoppage this spring. The Mediation Board proposed that the Southerners relinquish the pay advantage, thus setting the daily wage at $7 for both regions. The Southerners are said to be willing to make this concession.

Lewis declared yesterday that he had given the Southerners the union's "final word"—a statement which was taken to indicate that unless the Southerners signed a contract similar to that in the northern Appalachian region, a strike would be called.

Maj. Eliot Stresses Sea Power As Va. Institute Opens Forum

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., June 23.—The fifteenth Institute of Public Affairs was opened formally tonight at the University of Virginia for 12 days of discussions of the general topic of "The United States, the War and the Future."

MAJ. ELIOT

Gov. James H. Price was invited to join with President John Lloyd Newcomb, of the university, and Hardy C. Dillard, director of the institute, to make addresses of welcome. Maj. George Fielding Eliot, military analyst, was chosen to make the opening address and to discuss America's interest in sea power.

Other speakers selected for the opening session were Brook Emeny, authority on raw materials, author and head of the Foreign Affairs Council, and Ernest K. Lindley, Washington columnist.

Officials looked for a record attendance at this year's sessions. Registration began three days before the formal opening, much earlier than usual, and office files showed three times as many inquiries about programs and accommodations as last year.

The session tomorrow morning will open with an address on "World Revolution Comes to America" by Quincy Howe, radio commentator, editor in chief of Simon & Schuster, Inc., and author of "England Expects Every Man to Do His Duty." William Yandall Elliott, professor of government at Harvard University, and Howard Pierce Davis, radio commentator and former foreign editor of the Boston Transcript, will also speak tomorrow.

A discussion of the obligation of the United States as a world power is arranged for tomorrow afternoon's session. Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Washington correspondent of the Chicago Daily News and former Berlin and Paris bureau head for this paper, will speak tomorrow evening.

In a vesper service preliminary to the formal opening, Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, last night asserted that churches of this Nation have the right to ask the Government of the United States and all governments associated with it what their aims are and what better world they propose "shall be achieved for all men after this bloody sacrifice."

10,000 Hear Papal Legate In St. Paul

By International News Service

St. Paul, June 23.—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, papal legate of Pope Pius XII, tonight told an audience of 10,000 that America "must cleave to its God" if success is to crown its role in the present world crisis.

The Cardinal also suggested that the United States may play "a much more important role than it has played up to the present" in the world.

Both Minneapolis and St. Paul were jammed with visitors for the four-day Congress.

The high spot of tomorrow's program will be a pontifical mass at 10 a. m., at the Eucharistic Center at the State Fair Grounds, where huge outdoor altars have been erected. Cardinal Dougherty will pontificate.

"It would seem from current events throughout the world that our beloved country may be destined in the providence of God to play a much more important role than it has played up to the present," Cardinal Dougherty said at the reception.

"In that event, the American people should learn from the past and from actual history that if it turns its back on the Creator and follows after false gods in the shape of pride, pleasure and forgetfulness of the Almighty, it will meet the fate of other peoples and nations which have adored the golden calf and wallowed in vice."

Relief to Be Planned for WPA Cut Victims

The Commissioners today will consider revision of the District Board of Public Welfare rules to permit direct relief payments to employable persons without jobs as a means of meeting the July 1 emergency expected to result when District WPA rolls are slashed by Federal order, it was learned last night.

Acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning late yesterday told the Senate committee on District appropriations that direct relief was the "only solution," and asked for at least $800,000.

At the same time, the committee was informed by District WPA Administrator Paul Edwards that Federal authorities had relented and instead of the announced 30 per cent cut in local rolls, WPA employment would be reduced from the present 8,000 to 4,400.

Of the number to remain intact, Edwards pointed out, 3,200 are on certified defense jobs and cannot be touched. This leaves 1,200 workers, he said, to be spread over all other District projects.

Among the 3,800 to be removed, Edwards continued, about 1,700 will be taken off construction jobs and 1,900 from other programs.

Edwards and Van Hyning, together with Commissioners John Russell Young and Charles W. Kutz, appeared before the Overton Committee yesterday as it went into final stages of considering the District appropriation bill for 1942.

The city's immediate problem after the cut, Van Hyning told the Congressional group, would be ways and means of caring for the 3,800 workers who will be without jobs.

"And," he added, "I believe that direct relief is the only way we can care for these people."

He estimated that 50 per cent of those scheduled to lose their jobs would be unable to find other employment, explaining he was convinced there are now enough persons in the District to meet all requirements in private industries.

Van Hyning further estimated—in requesting the $800,000—that approximately $2,700 a month, in addition to present funds, would be necessary to continue welfare projects.

Commenting on the situation in relation to regular District employes, Engineer Commissioner Kutz observed:

"We will have to have more money, or abolish our 44-hour week and work our people more hours."

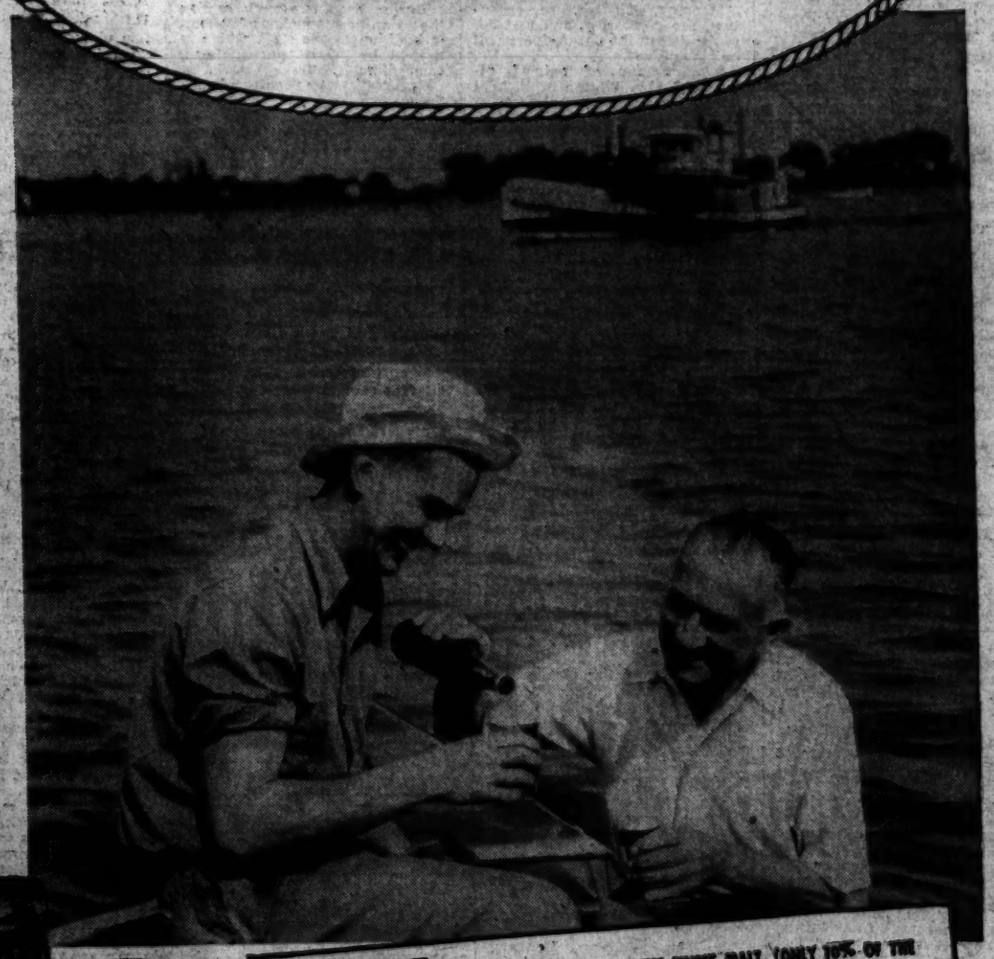
...THAN A CHESAPEAKE FISHING BOAT



IT MAY SEEM amazing but it's true. And it's one of the great things about this country . . . that no matter who you are . . . no matter whether you're rich or poor . . . you can get a good glass of beer . . . if you know your beer!

Because the flavor and quality of any beer is determined not by words and claims . . . not by the price you pay . . . but by the quality of the ingredients that go into it.

TODAY NO BREWER IN THE U. S. A. IS USING COSTLIER MALT OR COSTLIER HOPS THAN GUNTHER'S. AND THAT GOES FOR BEERS SELLING HERE FOR 15¢ . . . OR 20¢ . . . OR ANY PRICE!

For when a brewer makes enough beer and all of one quality . . . when the brewery has the latest scientific equipment . . . when the brewer sells most all of his beer close to the brewery . . . he can make real savings . . .

Then he can use these savings to buy the finest Grain, the highest-priced Malt and the costliest Hops . . . and still sell his beer for a DIME!

Gunther's has accomplished this amazing fact.

And as our volume grew by leaps and bounds we kept on buying finer machinery, finer equipment, finer grain, malt and hops.

In fact all the malt and hops used by Gunther's comes from the top 10% produced! So 9 out of 10 brewers today must definitely use less costly ingredients.

So no matter what beer you're drinking now . . . No matter what price you pay for beer . . . try Gunther's! Its dry, smooth, beer-y flavor will show you what a difference the finest equipment and costliest ingredients make.

PROOF THAT GUNTHER'S USES ONLY THE FINEST MALT. (ONLY 10% OF THE MALT BOUGHT BY BREWERS COSTS AS MUCH AS ALL THE MALT GUNTHER USES.)

"You are not only using the highest-priced Mid-Western Barley Malt but, in our opinion, as fine a quality of Malt that can be used in the manufacture of Beer."

PROOF THAT GUNTHER'S USES THE HIGHEST-PRICED HOPS IT IS POSSIBLE TO OBTAIN.

"We are in constant touch with all sources of supply, and are definitely of the opinion that the Gunther Brewing Company, Inc., is using the costliest Hops which can be procured."

A Pressing Problem

The office space problem created by the defense program is particularly acute in one of the War Department branches, where even elbow room has been cut down to make room for clerks. Yesterday an electrician arrived at the branch building and started cutting a hole in the wall for an electric fan. Queried the office wag: "Making room for another clerk?"

The Federal Diary

Appropriation Cut Puzzling to OPM

Officials in the OPM were puzzled when it became known that the President and the Budget Bureau had approved an appropriation for the 1942 fiscal year that would compel the administration division to cut its activities by 50 per cent. The administrative division is under Roy Jackson, former United States Steel official, and it covers the personnel, auditing, and services. It's doubtful, however, that any of the employes will lose their jobs, as they would be transferred to other defense agencies that are expanding. A number of stenographers and typists already have been shifted to War and Navy.

House Majority Leader John McCormack has asked the President to issue an executive order which would give Federal employes July 4, 5, and 6 as holidays. He made the request in a letter to the President. The President is understood to have refused to issue a similar order on Memorial weekend.

So many decentralization rumors are heard at Agriculture that Secretary Wickard attempted to quiet them by issuing a memo to his employes in which he said that "no definite or immediate moves are scheduled." The memo said in part: "In the next few weeks you will probably hear considerable talk about plans for moving part or all of the Washington offices to other locations. I realize how disturbing the uncertainty caused by such discussions may be to many of you who have homes and families here.

"Now there is urgent reason to speed up this process (decentralization) as much as possible because of the serious shortage of office and housing space caused by the rapid expansion of the defense program. To help out in this emergency situation the chiefs of the various bureaus and offices of the department are making an intensive study to determine which work being done in Washington could be carried on as well or perhaps better in some other location.

Understand Problems

"I cannot tell you, because I do not know myself as yet, just how many or which units of the department may eventually be moved out or how soon such actions will take place. I can only assure you that I and the members of my staff and the officials of your bureau are very much aware of the personal problems for you and your fellow employes that would be involved in any such move."

Richard R. Brown has resigned from Surplus Marketing Administration to become assistant chief in charge of administration of the Apprenticeship Unit at the Labor Department. At one time he was NYA deputy executive administrator. . . . Henry Paynter, who is promoting the Government's campaign to collect aluminum, is a former New York newspaperman who predicted the Hercules powder explosion and who wrote a series of articles exposing Nazi diplomats as super-spies. . . . UFWA is against decentralization. It's conducting a poll of its members at SEC, Railroad Retirement, ICC, and Federal Security on whether they want to be transferred or to remain here.

The AFGE lodge at the Adjutant General's Office has started a campaign for extra pay for employes in defense agencies required to work more than 39 hours a week. It has asked the national office to join the drive. . . . UFWA claims a "dramatic victory" has been won at USHA by obtaining a "splendid grievance procedure and an excellent promotions policy." Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson who made the statement said the recent bitterness at USHA over the Dana Doten case was due to the refusal of officials to allow an impartial committee to hear the case.

The new grievance board will be composed of one employe representative, one supervisor from the agency and a third to be decided upon by these two. Meantime, the Doten case, which split the local at USHA, has been dropped into the lap of John Carmody, Federal Works Administrator.

Senate Unit Speeds Supply Measure As Fiscal Year Nears Conclusion

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

District officials may have to operate the city government for several days without appropriated funds, it appeared last night, as the District Appropriations Subcommittee in the Senate rushed to get the 1942 supply bill in shape for debate at the next Senate session Thursday.

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman, said yesterday he had been given permission for the subcommittee to report the $52,500,000 bill while the Senate is in recess out of respect for the late Senator Pat Harrison.

The subcommittee will start marking up the bill this morning, Senator Overton said, with the expectation of reporting it tomorrow. If he is unable to bring the bill up Thursday, four days before expiration of the fiscal year, Overton declared that the Senate's schedule would not permit debate on the measure before Saturday.

Time Running Short

Whatever happens, the time remaining for Senate action on the bill and agreement of conferees on Senate changes is running short with a strong possibility that the fiscal year may expire before enactment, particularly in event of a Senate-House controversy over the size of the Federal payment.

That some source of additional District revenues will have to be found—either an increase above the present $6,000,000 Federal payment, or higher taxes—was indicated yesterday as the District Commissioners, at the subcommittee's request, submitted a $5,922,025 list of city improvements considered "desirable, necessary and essential." The list was pared down to include only expenditures which would have to be made on the projects during the 1942 fiscal year.

The list included 11 items of proposed expenditure which the Commissioners told an executive subcommittee session, are necessary to provide municipal service and facilities for thousands of new and incoming defense workers.

Improvements Planned

The improvements proposed in this category would cost a total of $1,563,450. The list:

Three convenience stations, $40,000; new fire alarm boxes, $115,450; addition to the Bennin— School, $200,000; to complete an addition to the Van Ness School, $200,000; new elementary school at Hillside Road and Alabama Avenue Southeast, $167,500; new elementary school at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast, $175,000; new police precinct station, Forty-second Street and Benning Road, $40,000; ward building at Gallinger Hospital, $150,000; to provide emergency civilian protection under the LaGuardia civil defense program, $500,000; plans for grade separation at Rock Creek Park and Klingle Road Northwest, $18,000; plans for Georgetown by-pass in the line of K Street Northwest, $100,000.

House to Act Next Week On Recreation Bill

House leaders yesterday acted to rescue the recreation bill from a legislative jam that threatened to tie up pending District legislation for three weeks.

In a conference with Chairman John Hunter of the Recreation Subcommittee, leaders agreed that legislation to merge play facilities in the city uunder a citizen-dominated board may be called up "out of order" either Tuesday, July 1, or the following day under unanimous consent.

The move was taken by Hunter to give the District a chance to set in motion a reorganized recreation administration as soon as possible after the start of the 1942 fiscal year.

District Day Canceled

House adjournment out of respect for Senator Pat Harrison, who died Sunday, canceled the District Day program of Chairman Jennings Randolph of the District Committee. Randolph was to have called up five bills yesterday. With the exception of the recreation bill, action on these and two bills reported by the committee at a morning meeting had to be postponed until next District Day, July 14.

Measures affected include a bill to authorize District small loan companies to charge 3 per cent interest a month on loans of $500 or less and legislation to permit expenditure of $50,000 additional for construction of a new Recorder of Deeds building, to safeguard the confidential nature of public relief rolls and to amend minor provisions of the Unemployment Compensation Act.

With an amendment reducing proposed "dry zones" from 600 to 400 feet, the District Committee favorably reported the Schulte bill banning liquor-price advertising. Another amendment to permit use of wine lists in restaurants and hotels is expected to be written into the bill before it reaches the House.

Army Areas in Zones

In addition to its price features, the measure, sponsored by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, prohibits sale of alcoholic beverages in the vicinity of churches, schools and Army, Navy and Marine posts.

The committee also approved a bill relieving out-of-town sightseeing companies from payment of license fees in the District, providing they run "only occasional" excursions here with passengers from other communities.

Rain Fells Trees, Ties Traffic Here; Record in Baltimore

MAROONED—The photographer found this auto abandoned during last night's downpour of rain. Bearing Virginia license plates, it was stalled on a roadway in Potomac Park, near the Tidal Basin

A heavy rainstorm, driven by a 40-mile-an-hour wind, last night broke a three-day heat wave here, and flooded cellars, inundated streets, felled trees and snarled traffic in sections of the Washington area.

One man was hurt when pinned to the street by a wind-toppled tree at Eighth and O Streets Northwest. The victim, James Johnson, 35, colored, of 1537 Columbia Street Northwest, was rescued by two passersby and treated at Emergency Hospital for leg injuries.

Only an hour before the storm struck the Capital at 7:35, it had battered Baltimore with an unprecedented downpour. Within an hour, 3:15 inches of rain had fallen in Baltimore, and by the end of the second hour, the rain had risen to 3.57 inches.

Washington was more fortunate though in the path of the same storm, created by a Canadian-born cool air mass moving down across the country and contacting the hot air masses responsible for the East's latest heat spell.

The Weather Bureau here recorded .8 inches precipitation in three hours, and the damage in this vicinity was comparatively light. Twenty minutes after the thunderstorm started here, the temperature plunged 10 degrees, from 80 to 70 degrees, and the forecaster promised similar moderate temperatures for today and tomorrow, together with general fair weather.

The maximum here yesterday was 91 degrees, which together with abnormally high humidity of 72 per cent, caused discomfort.

The Water Department reported 35 calls for flooded sewer drains and cellars, mostly in the Northeast and Chevy Chase. In the Maryland part of Chevy Chase firemen were kept busy for several hours pumping water out of cellars in a dozen homes along 6500 block Chestnut and Elm Streets. Many Bethesda dwellers also complained of cellar inundation.

Five feet of water under the Georgia Avenue railroad viaduct prohibited traffic there, and vehicles were detoured for an hour. A large tree blocked traffic for an hour at 7702 Blair Road, Silver Spring. At the Bladensburg Peace Cross, cars drove through in water up to the hubcaps.

Potomac Electric Power Co. announced that little damage had been done to its lines, although the wind blew down wires at several points; and lights in Bannockburn Heights, Glen Echo, Md., were blacked out for a short period. Lightning struck a Postal Telegraph cable box on Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., burning the equipment.

Two Schoolgirls Reported Missing; Low Grades Blamed

Parents of two Washington schoolgirls reported to police yesterday the absence of their children since last Wednesday, when school closed, and blamed poor grades on their report cards for their leaving home.

BEATRICE

Meanwhile, Mrs. Minnie Johnston Kirin, of 1210 Thirteenth Street Northwest, whose 16-year-old daughter, Evelyn, disappeared over a month ago, expressed her conviction that the girl had met with foul play.

One of the schoolgirls reported missing was Beatrice Elizabeth Tinsman, 13, of 2528 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, a student at the Anacostia Junior High School. The other was Vivian Tracey, 16, of 3915 B Street Southeast.

Mrs. Agnes B. Caton, mother of Beatrice, and whose husband, William B. Caton, is a building contractor, said her daughter was worried because she was failing in mahmatics and would have to go to summer school.

Beatrice has relatives in both Maryland and Virginia, said Mrs. Caton, besides a cousin in northeast Washington with whom she spends much of her time. When the child was first missed on Wednesday morning, Mrs. Caton said, it was believed she had gone to the house of one of her relatives. Over the weekend, Mrs. Caton and her husband visited these relatives in an effort to locate the girl, before notifying the police yesterday.

According to her mother, Mrs. Julia Tracey, Vivian left home last Wednesday. Yesterday police located a 16-year-old girl who said that she ran away with Vivian. Both boarded a truck with Michigan tags, carrying two men. Louise said she left the truck at Elkridge, Md., while Vivian continued on.

Mrs. Minnie Johnston Kirin, of 1210 Thirteenth Street Northwest, whose daughter, Evelyn, disappeared over a month ago, described the child yesterday as appearing to be about 11 or 12 years old. She has dark brown hair and eyes, and wears silver-rimmed glasses, Mrs. Kirin said. The girl is less than 5 feet tall and weighs but 80 pounds. When last seen she was wearing navy blue slacks, a sweater and white tennis shoes.

Salesman Suggests Highway Shelters To Aid Hitchhiking Soldiers Get Rides

A traveling salesman, motoring daily on the roads, has seen what he thinks to be one of the most pressing needs of service men and yesterday come to The Post to volunteer what he considers its solution.

Everywhere on the highways, said Henry K. Mularkey, 4542 Montgomery Avenue, Bethesda, Md., service men are asking rides either to their homes or nearby cities. Some get rides, many don't. Their service pay doesn't permit of much travel.

His idea is for every community in the country to erect a small inexpensive shelter on its outskirts, each attended by a volunteer worker. To these, service men with proper leave credentials could go, as could motorists who have space in their cars and the willingness to give the service men a lift. The credentials of both the service men and the motorists would be checked by the attendant in the shelters.

The shelters might be built by volunteer workmen in the various communities; the lumber contributed. Mularkey says it would fill one of the greatest needs he sees among service men in his travels and would appear to be a patriotic enterprise on the part of communities and motorists.

Mother Accused of Cruelty to Child To Testify Today as Trial Nears End

A District Court jury of three women and nine men today is expected to receive the question of whether Mrs. Evelyn N. Stewart is guilty of beating and burning her 7-year-old son, Jimmy, at their apartment, 2133 First Street Northwest, last April 17.

Mrs. Stewart probably will take the stand in her own defense this morning before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

Two of the boy's school teachers and his stepfather, Irving Stewart, declared from the witness stand yesterday that Jimmy was inclined to be mischievous.

The question Justice Goldsborough was seeking the answer to yesterday was whether Jimmy is "bad" or whether he has a lot of "spirit."

Mrs. Viletta Brown, Jimmy's first-grade teacher from February to June, 1940, testified that "Jimmy was a happy child. He wasn't really bad. Sometimes, though, he was annoying in the room and bothered the other children when they had something to do."

Mrs. Madeline Marschalk, his teacher this year, told the jury:

"He was a very fragile child, very eager and very friendly. His social adjustment was not quite successful. He hadn't learned to live with other children. . . . He was always very clean and well cared for."

Stewart denied he had ever used a strap on the boy, although he said he had "soaked" him on occasion.

Jimmy still refused to come into the courtroom yesterday.

Buckley Case Ruling Reversed

Judge Newman Voids Reopening Of Charges Against D. C. Attorney

M. Edward Buckley, Washington attorney, will not have to stand trial on a reopened driving-while-drunk charge, Judge Hobart Newman declared yesterday in a ruling that reversed the earlier decision of a fellow police court judge.

Judge Newman, setting down his opinion in a 11-page memorandum, decided that reopening the charge would place Buckley in double jeopardy. Previously Judge George D. Neilson ruled the opposite and declared that the defendant must stand a new trial.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch immediately told the court he intended to carry the case to the Court of Appeals.

The case against Buckley stems from an accident that occurred last July in the 2100 block of Thirteenth Street Northwest. Buckley was charged with driving while drunk in connection with the accident. Later this charge was dropped and another charge, that of driving on the wrong side of the street, substituted. To this plea Buckley pleaded guilty and paid a fine.

Still later the corporation counsel again filed a driving-while-drunk charge against Buckley in connection with the same accident. Buckley, contending he had been punished once, and should not be tried again for the same offense, protested he was being placed in double jeopardy.

In his opinion yesterday Judge Newman, emphasizing he had no purpose in criticizing the ruling of another judge, granted Buckley's plea. He pointed out that the original driving while drunk charge was changed with the consent of the corporation counsel, and that the corporation counsel had allowed Buckley to plead guilty to the charge of driving on the wrong side of the street, a lesser offense.

Judge Newman concluded that in cases in which the prosecutor dismisses a higher charge and accepts a plea of guilty to a lesser one "that the court is in honor bound to carry out the implied (if not express) agreement between the Government and the defendant that the higher charge has been thereby finally disposed of."

Contract Ends Cafeteria Strike

More than 120 employes of the S. and W. Cafeteria, located in the Washington Building, Fifteenth and G Streets northwest, will return to work today it was announced last night after a 12-hour conference by a spokesman for the U. S. Conciliation Service.

Members of the cafeteria workers union employed in the S and W cafeteria have been out on strike since May 26.

Phone Employe Drowns In Georgetown Channel

George J. Baur, 50, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., yesterday was drowned in the Georgetown Channel, police reported.

Son of the late Detective Sergt. Frank Baur, the telephone worker resided at the Capital Hotel, 1018 I Street Northwest. Police said his body was discovered at the foot of Twenty-fifth Street Northwest by a passerby at 10 a. m. He was fully clothed and had been in the water a short time, they said.

A hotel attendant said Baur left about 5 a. m. yesterday. Mrs. Baur, police said, is employed in a local department store. The drowned man has been with the telephone company since 1909.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Baur, of 7414 Georgia Avenue Northwest; six children, Mrs. George Hele, 311 Birch Street, Takoma Park, Md.; George Baur, jr., a private at Camp Meade, Md.; Frank Baur, 4026 Ninth Street Northeast, also a telephone company employe; John Baur, Robert Baur and James Baur, all of 7414 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

La Follette Statue Moved 26 Inches

The statue of the late Senator Robert La Follette, one of the little group of "willful men" in the fateful days preceding America's entry into the first World War, was moved 26 inches in Statuary Hall yesterday.

Officials at the Capitol said they had noticed that La Follette was partially obscured by the statue of Huey Long, of Louisiana, directly alongside.

It took a crew of workmen with scaffolding, block and tackle virtually all day to accomplish the moving.

Policeman Off Duty Arrests Hit-Run Driver

Private J. A. Jones, Second Precinct police rookie, was off duty last night. But when he saw a car come weaving down the street, hit another car and keep right on weaving, he knew he had work to do.

In his own car Jones chased the hit-and-run driver from the 100 block of C Street Southwest to Seventeenth and C Streets Northeast—about 20 blocks. As a result the driver was taken to the Ninth Precinct Station to face a driving-while-drunk charge and two charges of hit-and-run.

Veterans Hold Encampment

Fifth Column Won't Make U.S. Another France, V.F.W. Told

SHOW OPENS VETERANS' ENCAMPMENT—The Veterans of Foreign Wars opened their twenty-second annual encampment last night with patriotic tableaux in Roosevelt High School auditorium. Appearing in the tableau above were Shirley Russell, of Takoma Park, Md., as Liberty, and Jerome Goldenberg, of 3913 Thirteenth Street Southeast, as a wounded soldier

"The great wall of China and the French Maginot Line failed because of intrigue from within. We will never permit our 'walls of defense' to be penetrated in any way," Brig. Gen. Frank J. Hines, Veterans Administrator, declared last night in an address at the twenty-second annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the Roosevelt High School auditorium.

"Those few dissenters who cannot be thinking straight will soon be hushed by a wave of patriotism, for we will not permit the aggressor to touch the soil of the Western Hemisphere," asserted Gen. Hines. "We are fighting for even greater freedom this time."

Opening exercises at the V. F. W. ceremonies was a parade of colors, followed by a solemn commemorative service for the veterans who died last year. This part of the program was presented by the dim light of a few candles on the stage.

After the service, the audience witnessed tableaux relating to the wars in which the United States has participated. In this presentation, the V. F. W. was assisted by a chorus from the Washington Opera Guild. Helene Gilliaert and Margaret Ann Bott were soloists.

The presence of the British flag on the stage brought great applause from the audience as did the statement of George G. McLeish of the Walter Reed Post that "10,000,000 hands hold freedom high in Britain's Isles today."

Presiding over the evening's exercises was Department Commander Leonard J. Bacon. Rev. Howard E. Snyder gave the invocation.

Tonight and tomorrow night, the V. F. W. will hold business meetings.

Chinese Woman, Found Tied in House, Becomes Mother After Release

Mrs. Lai Ping Lee, 39-year-old Chinese woman who police found shortly after 4 a. m. yesterday bound to a first-floor banister and who gave birth to a girl several minutes after her release, is in "very good" condition, Gallinger Hospital attendants said last night.

Still unanswered, however, was the question of how Mrs. Lee came to be lashed to the balustrade, apparently beaten, in a vacant frame house ten blocks from her home at 4835 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Lee told police that she had been beaten and bound by her husband, Park Lin Lee, who was being held for investigation last night at the Sixth Precinct after he had denied the charges. Lee gave his residence as 3108 Eleventh Street Northwest. Both this and his wife's residence are the addresses of laundries which he operates.

Police found Mrs. Lee at 5816 Georgia Avenue Northwest when they responded to a call of a woman screaming at that address. She was released and carried to the front porch where she gave birth to the baby girl while awaiting an Emergency Hospital ambulance.

The property, now vacant, is owned by Lee and the family resided there until about a year ago, according to Joseph Licausi who operates a shoe repair shop next door.

Licausi said that he had known the family "for 20 years" and described them as "very nice people" who "never caused any trouble." This was corroborated by neighbors of the 4800 block laundry where Mrs. Lee lived with five of her nine other children.

Next! 13 Who Hewed to the Hairline For 3 Years Get Barbers' Diplomas

All manner of clips and trims were developed but there were no short cuts to diplomas.

Thirteen colored barbers have gotten their sheepskins through what was described as "faithful and diligent application" in the School of Advanced Science of Barbering in the night school of Armstrong High.

It was the first such class ever held in the public school system here, probably the first in any public school system in the country, according to C. W. Adams, the night school principal.

Classes under Prof. David D. Ferebee were started with 26 members. Thirteen came through. These had attended class three nights a week for three years and had coupled advanced work in dermatology and proper care of the hair and scalp, with "about every social and recreational program, including dramatics, that the school offered," Adams stated.

Sniper to Die Oct. 8; New Trial Refused

Eklund Calm As Justice Proctor Sentences Him To Electric Chair

John E. Eklund, 28, convicted of first-degree murder in the "sniper slaying" of a colored youth, stood calmly before Justice James M. Proctor in District Court yesterday and heard his sentence of death in the electric chair October 8.

The sentence followed the court's refusal of a new trial requested by Defense Attorneys Francis C. Brooke and Leonard P. Walsh on the grounds police listened to Eklund's conversation with his attorneys by dictaphone and secured evidence they should not have had.

Brooke declared that "this sacred right of a man to talk to his counsel" had been violated and that it was "a treacherous rape of the defendant's constitutional rights."

The Court replied that the finding of the jury nevertheless must stand.

Before passing sentence, Judge Proctor told Eklund in a low voice that he had been convicted of first-degree murder and that the law fixes a single penalty for the conviction.

Attorneys led Eklund's mother from the nearly empty court room. Pale and expressionless, Eklund rose when Justice Proctor addressed him with the fateful word.

Still not visibly moved after conclusion of the sentence, Eklund was led from the room to be returned to the District Jail.

Robert Montgomery Visiting Washington

Robert Montgomery, thinking Washington more interesting than Hollywood, where he stars, came here yesterday for what he can see and hear.

Montgomery

At the Mayflower Hotel, Montgomery, who served as a volunteer ambulance driver in France before that country's fall, said there was nothing extraordinary about his visit unless it be said he is the rare visitor here who is seeking nothing of the Government or anyone.

The war excitement is growing on the West Coast, he remarked, and the citizens of California felt a "sense of relief" when the Army took over the North American airplane plant. If war comes, he said he would gladly serve in any way the Government needed him.

The registration of volunteer defense workers he considered one of the best things the country has done, based on his observations of volunteer activities in England. "It is fantastic, the amount of good work they have done there," he said. He will leave today for New York.

Dodgers' Fitzsimmons Takes 13th Over Bucs

Pittsburgh Bows, 9 to 4; Flock Gains

Brooklyn Cuts Cards' Lead to Half Game Rookie Fraks' Homer In 8th Scores Three

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 23.—The fat and remarkable Freddie Fitzsimmons pitched his thirteenth successive victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today as the Brooklyn Dodgers won a 9-to-4 slugfest at Forbes Field and inched within a half-game of the league-leading St. Louis Cards, who were idle.

Fitz's jinx over the locals threatened at last to be broken when he went into the eighth inning trailing by 3 to 4, but the jinx was only catching its second breath.

The Brooks suddenly fell on Bob Klinger for a cluster of hits, driving the tying run across and leaving two on the bags. Then Herman Fraks, the rookie catcher from Montreal, went to the plate as a pinch-hitter for Fitzsimmons.

He arched a home run into the upper right-field stands to score three runs and sew up the contest. The Dodgers counted twice more off Klinger in the ninth and finally chased him from the mound, but this was anticlimax.

Fitzsimmons, as a matter of fact, would have coasted to an easy victory if his teammates had not kicked the ball around in the sixth and permitted the Pirates to score three times on a pair of hits. It was the third victory of the season for the veteran knuckleballer, who set an all-time won and lost record last year.

Brooklyn, playing without its regular second baseman, Billy Herman, raked two Pirate pitchers for seventeen hits, with Joe Medwick, Pete Reiser and Dolf Camilli each contributing three, and Peewee Reese banging a double and a single.

Brewer Club Purchased by Veeck, Grimm

Milwaukee, Wis., June 23.—The Milwaukee Brewers, allar club of the American Baseball Association, today became the property of William L. Veeck, jr., treasurer of the Chicago Cubs, and Charlie Grimm, former manager of the Cubs.

Veeck and Grimm have purchased the Brewers for $100,00, and Grimm will take over the managership of the team while Veeck handles its business affairs, it was announced. They will bring with them Lou Novikoff, colorful Cub rookie, on a 24-hour recall option from the Cubs.

Grimm, who has been acting as a coach for the Cubs this year, succeeds Bill Killefer, also a former Cub manager. The poor showing of the team and financial difficulties encountered as a result were given as reasons for the sale.

Novikoff, so-called "Mad Russian," who hit .363 in the Pacific Coast League last year, has hit only .237 against big league pitching so far. Bright things are still expected from him, however, and it is hoped his sojourn with the Brewers will put new life into the club.

Bobby Brownell Has 75 in National Play At Columbus, Ohio; Donohue Has a 75

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, June 23.—A red-haired, freckle-faced youth of 19, who less than a week ago had a cast removed from a broken collar bone, ripped four strokes off par today to pace 169 starters through the first half of the qualifier for the forty-fourth National Intercollegiate Golf Championships.

He's Earl Stewart, junior at Louisiana State University, and his course-record 68 gave him a two-stroke edge over the Nation's best collegiate mashie-swingers battling for the medal over Ohio State University's course.

Eight Break Par

Eight others gave par a beating, and four matched even figures, as the classy field gave a low-scoring exhibition in the first National Intercollegiate held over a university course.

Robert W. Brownell, Duke's Southern Intercollegiate champion from Washington, D. C., was among the 75 shooters with a 39, 36. John M. Donohue, of Georgetown, also had 75 to lead the Hoya delegation.

So low was the scoring that it appeared a 36-hole total of 155 might be necessary to land among the 6 qualifiers for match play, which continues through Saturday.

Play-Off Tomorrow

At the half-way mark, 61 had 77 or better, while 19 had 78 presaging a huge play-off for the final places unless tomorrow's play clears up the situation.

Stewart, whose home is in Dallas, Tex., suffered a broken collar bone early in May in a fall from a horse.

He swung his first club in seven weeks last Friday, but he missed par only on the second hole today, while turning in birdies on the fifth, seventh, ninth, twelfth and thirteenth.

Three years ago, when only 16, Stewart won the Texas Open championsip from a field which included such stars as Jimmy Demaret and other well-known professionals.

Greiner Has 72

Back of Stewart with 2-under-par 70's were a pair of Stanford stalwarts, Charles Finger and Dee Replogle. At 71 were Bud Plantz, of Colorado College; John Holmstrom, of Illinois; A. C. Williams, of Yale, and Jack Bariteau, of San Jose State; Raymond Brownell, of Stanford, and Dale Morey, of Louisiana State.

Md. Magistrate Ridicules New Fishing Laws

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., June 23.—In acquitting two persons charged with violation of the game laws and suspending sentence on two others, Magistrate Harry E. Snyder, in local police court, likened Maryland's new game and fish laws to the confusion that reigned at the building of the Tower of Babel.

Magistrate Snyder said it was ridiculous on the part of the Legislature to pass a bill which opens the season earlier on one type of game fish and not on species of relative minor character.

It was the contention of B. A. Mulleniz, who was found with two goggle-eye bass in his possession, that statements in the press announcing the opening of the bass season on June 15, made no mention of the kind of bass which could be caught legally. He contended the goggle-eye is of the bass family. The new law however, only permits the catching of small and large mouth black bass, and not sun perch and goggle-eye bass until July 1.

The magistrate also took occasion to criticize game wardens who arrested Frank Henninger, who had six bass in his possession, five of which were far beyond the legal size and one that was a half inch short of the legal size. Snyder said that if State police arrested every auto driver who exceeded the speed limit by a half mile an hour, magistrates would have to sit 24 hours a day every day of the year.

Baer, Simon Fight Aug. 15 In New York

By International News Service

New York, June 23.—Because of their spectacular performances against Joe Louis, Abe Simon and Buddy Baer today were matched for a return engagement August 15 at the New York's Polo Grounds. Promoter Mike Jacobs, in closing the match, said the winner probably will get another crack at the heavyweight championship next winter.

All of this was pleasing, indeed, to James Joy Johnston, the little sparrow of a man who manages the Herculean Simon. Johnston lost no time in predicting that Abe would avenge the defeat suffered at Baer's hands in the top preliminary bouts of the Louis-Tommy Farr card on August 29, 1937.

Johnston asserted:

"Simon has improved a thousand times since they stopped his first match with Baer; and Buddy must have improved a little.

"This time, they'll not have to halt the match, because Abe will have Buddy kayoed in short order."

The battle is scheduled for 15 rounds. Baer was awarded a technical knockout in the first duel when Simon sustained a gory cut about the mouth in the third round. The 254-pound New Yorker had won the first two rounds of the bout when Baer opened the gash.

Since their preliminary show, both Buddy and Abe were lifted from their comparative obscurity by matches against Champion Louis this year. Simon lasted 13 rounds against the Brown Bomber in March and Baer blasted Joe through the ropes before being cold-cocked himself in the seventh.

Their return will bring together the heftiest guys in the ring. Baer tips the beams at 240, some 14 pounds less than Simon.

Simon had been promised a return match with Louis in July, but this was abandoned after the champion's close battle with Billy Conn last week. The cancellation was a disappointment to Johnston, but he had his own explanation for it.

He said, "Joe knows Abe is no pushover. Abe is just a little too tough for Louis to take on after Conn. But we'll get another chance with Joe yet, because he'll lick Lou Nova, and I have no doubt as to what Abe will do to Baer."

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 23.—After four days of hot weather and slick water, the nine coaches whose boys will be rowing in the Forty-fourth Intercollegiate Regatta on the Hudson Wednesday got a chance today to test their boatloads in rough going.

A morning wind against a contrary tide kicked up white caps. After they subsided somewhat, all the crews but Washington got out on the water, with Rutgers and M. I. T. especially anxious to test their watermanship in a real chop.

They were the only crews which braved the river in midstream. M. I. T. needed the work because the Engineers have been here only since late Friday. Rutgers welcomed the workout because this is their first trip to Poughkeepsie.

Having watched them from Coach "Chuck" Logg's launch, we'd say the lads from the Raritan may give a surprisingly good account. They certainly are big enough. As heavy as Washington or Cornell, they powered their shell through the biggest swells without perceptible loss of headway. They should be in there battling the Easterners for a good spot in the middle of the pack.

Late today all of the 19 crews—nine varsity, four junior varsity and six freshman—put considerable mileage under their hulls after the wind calmed down. Cornell, which went four miles close to the shore in the morning, reeled off another similar stretch, and the others put in about the same work.

Washington continued the favorite, though Coach Al Ulbrickson claims his Huskies aren't quite the boat they were two months ago when they gave California such a thorough licking. California's fine form made them the general second choice, with Cornell, Columbia or Syracuse expected to make the best showing for the East.

Cornell is big and has power. Columbia and Syracuse are in the "dark horse" category. Both have worked virtually in secret.

Wisconsin drew first blood today. A "Wismell" four, made up of three Wisconsin coxswains and one from Cornell, beat Columbia and a Rutgers-Syracuse combine by open water in a half-mile race

'Rajah' Quits Oklahoma City Pilot's Job

By International News Service

Oklahoma City, June 23.—Rogers Hornsby, one of baseball's all-time greats, tonight had again divorced himself from the baseball world.

Hornsby, regarded by many as the greatest right-handed hitter of all time, resigned today as manager of Oklahoma City of the Texas League. John Holland, owner of the Indians, said Hornsby quit of his own accord because of the team's poor showing on the field and at the gate this season.

Homer Peel, former Shreveport pilot, succeeds Hornsby. Last season, Hornsby took the Oklahoma City club and converted it into a Texas League championship contender.

The former major league star and manager declined to announce his plans other than to say that he was returning to his home in St. Louis.

Ace Parker Gets His Questionnaire

Portsmouth, Va., June 23 (AP).—Ace Parker, star of the Brooklyn football Dodgers, voted most valuable player in the National Pro Football League last season, received his draft questionnaire about two weeks ago and expects to be called for his physical examination "any day."

Griffith Offered $40,000 for Wakefield

Nats Owner Made Offer June 19; Briggs Topped It $10,000

Clark Griffith telegraphed an offer of $40,000 to young Dick Wakefield, University of Michigan sophomore, in an attempt to sign him for the Washington club, it was revealed yesterday.

Two days following Griffith's offer, Wakefield signed a contract with the Detroit club for a reported $50,000 figure.

Griffith was dismayed when announcement of Wakefield's signing with Detroit was announced.

"I had planned a $40,000 surprise for Washington fans," said the Nats' owner. "My club was in last place, but I wanted to show the Washington public that I was willing to go high for talent."

The Nats' owner was confident, he said, that Washington would be the team to sign Wakefield, who had been besieged with offers by nine big league clubs.

"I talked with his mother by telephone to Chicago on June 19, and asked her to tell me the best offer the boy had received. I have known the Wakefield family for years, and she told me that $30,000 was the top offer to date.

"I told Mrs. Wakefield I would confirm a $40,000 offer to him by

WASHINGTON, JUNE 24, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The fellow who will probably end up as the batting champion of the American League is Ted Williams, gangling, turkey-necked outfielder of the Red Sox. Williams is rapping the ball at a .407 rate and he seems to be amazing nobody. It has long been known that the guy could hit.

POVICH

During the past week Williams was paid an unsolicited compliment that was extreme, indeed. The Detroit Tigers gave a young University of Michigan outfielder named Dick Wakefield $50,000 to sign a Tiger contract, for one paramount reason: Wakefield bears a remarkable physical and facial resemblance to Williams, swings the bat in much the same manner, and the Tigers are willing to gamble $50,000 on the possibility that a young man of the Williams mold has a bright big league future, even before they've seen him swing a bat against good pitching.

Williams, with his high temper and sour-puss tactics when he is in a batting slump, will never be hailed as any model for American youth, but in one respect at least he has been a very estimable character. He is no good hitter by accident. He was probably the most industrious young rookie ever to break into the big leagues. He worked at the art of hitting.

While other ball players were engaging in horse-play on the bench or rassling in the dressing room, Williams would peer ceaselessly at the pitching he saw in practice. He asked questions, chiefly about pitchers. He demanded to know what certain pitchers were throwing, and when. He asked for batting tips from Manager Joe Cronin and every old ball player he encountered. Hitting has been a passion with him.

In his early days with the Red Sox, Williams was in the ball park at 10 a. m., swinging a bat. The mere 30 minutes of pregame batting practice irked him. He wanted more, so he brought to the park all the semipro pitchers he could corral, and they pitched to him for hours while he perfected his timing. He was honing his batting eye for the afternoon's ball game.

As a hitter, Williams' chief charm seems to be his loose swing, the envy of all batters aside from those naturally gifted few who can get power otherwise. If the fellow has a weakness, the league's pitchers haven't found it yet. He has defied the old maxim about the low outside ball that is supposed to be the toughest pitch to hit. He murders pitching that is low and away.

Washington pitchers stopped him in one series last year with a new and thoroughly desperate trick. "Pitch to his strength," Bucky Harris commanded them, "and let him hit the ball. Throw inside, and take a chance." Harris was banking on the distance of the right field fences in the Boston park to defeat Williams. It did. The Washington right and center fielders, playing far back, hauled down a half dozen 400-foot drives by Williams.

He can be the problem child of the outfielders, however. In one afternoon at Fenway Park, he hit home runs over the left, center and right field walls and bounced another hit off the center field fence. He has cured his old weakness of swinging at bad balls and lately has been content to take a walk.

Williams is a very objective young man. He wants to lead the league in batting because it will bring him more money on his next year's contract. He lays great store by money, which of course is not an uncommon trait. But when Manager Joe Cronin last year shuffled the batting order and took Williams out of the clean-up spot, moving him ahead of Jimmy Foxx, he was mad. "There goes my chance to lead the league in runs-batted-in," he wailed, not caring whether Cronin heard him.

He was bitter against everything Boston last summer and told interviewers they could quote him. He said he didn't like Boston, the fans, the baseball writers or anything about the town, and that he wanted to be traded to Detroit. A temporary batting slump was vexing him, but he was not losing sight of the fact that the Red Sox were doomed to no better than fourth place and the Tigers might win the pennant with the resultant World Series split.

But Williams is happy now. Everything must be lovely in Boston with him these days. He is getting his basehits, and if there is anything a ball player likes better than a basehit it is three or four of the same. They will add up to pretty figures on his 1942 contract, especially if he winds up as the league batting champion, which he probably will.

Ty Cobb, Caught Off Base, Loses His Goat to Scribes in New York

Georgia Peach Forgets Lines and Script As Ruth Match Build-up Backfires on Him

By the United Press

New York, June 23.—Ty Cobb, baseball's immortal outfielder, lost one in the wind today when he arrived from California for his three-city golf battle with baseball's all-time home run king, Babe Ruth.

Cobb, as fiery at 54 as in his heyday with Detroit's Tigers, suddenly lost his cockiness when hoaxing sports writers ladeled out false reports concerning Ruth's prowess on the links.

The sagging and somewhat horrified "Georgia Peach" gulped.

"Good, Lord!" he said. "If I'd known all this I'da stayed home. Ruth'll murder me. I'm just a fair amateur player, you know. About handicap nine."

This press reception backfired completely—for a while—on Cobb and on Freddy Corcoran, tournament manager of the Professional Golfers Association, who had arranged the three-match series: At Boston Wednesday, at New York Friday and at Detroit within the next ten days.

According to Corcoran's script, Cobb was supposed to come out of the dugout with a bellow and put the blast on George Herman Ruth. Ty had been groomed for this occasion during his stopoff at Detroit, where Sir Walter Hagen gave him lengthy instructions by telephone on how to win matches in advance by getting an opponent's goat. Cobb was an apt pupil; you will recall that he was about tops in goat-getting on the diamond. After talking to Hagen, Tyrus took a few practice jabs at Ruth in the automobile city.

Cobb Regains Form

But at today's press huddle, it was Cobb who lost his nanny. He confessed all before the newspapermen let him in on the hoax. Then Ty grinned.

"You fellows had me pretty scared," he said. "But now I'm going right out to the Fresh Meadow course with Al Ciuci and get in some practice licks. I'll show that Ruth how to play left-handed golf.—I'll——"

And Cobb was right back in form again.

Both Ty and Babe are port-side golfers, just as they were left-handed hitters. Ty is a 213-pounder, bronzed and youngish-looking despite his sparse brown hair. He has been playing golf for about nine years, about 11 less than Ruth. His best score this year was a 71 in the St. Patrick's Day tournament on the par-70 Lakeside course in San Francisco.

Ruth flew to Boston today to get in two days of practice on the Commonwealth course, where their first 18-hole match will be played. The second 18 holes of match play will be held at Fresh Meadows and the third at an undesignated Detroit course. Proceeds of the matches will go to the United Service Organization.

Washington Club Honors Thomson for 20 Years Service

Cox Gets Subpar 68; Members Give Scotch Pro Check for $500 To Show Appreciation

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Washington Golf and Country Club members honored their professional—Dave Thomson—for 20 years of faithful service last night at the club in a testimonial dinner which included the gift of a $500 check to the Scotch pro from the members.

Dr. J. T. McClenehen, who selected Thomson for the job from 57 applicants 20 years ago, made the presentation during brief and informal talks following the dinner, which was attended by some 200 club members and a dozen of Thomson's fellow pros.

Thomson has not only fulfilled the duties of professional but for the past seven years has doubled as pro and greenskeeper.

Wiffy Cox Wins

District professionals and Washington club members competed in a pro-amateur and sweepstakes tournament in the afternoon in which Wiffy Cox, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president from Congressional, showed the way with a 3-under-par 68.

Cox bettered par by two shots on the out nine with a 33 and was back in 35, missing par on the tenth, when he trapped his second, and then sliding a trick 3-foot putt past the cup on the eighteenth which would have given him a 67. Wiffy made only one sizable putt in the round.

Burning Tree Pro Lewis Worsham, jr., and Logan Manders won the pro-amateur competition with a best ball 61, Worsham shooting a 72 and Manders a 77, with an 8 on the seventeenth hole. Manders used ten handicap strokes to advantage.

Burton Takes Amateur

The amateur sweepstakes among the host club members went to M. H. Burton with 88, 23—65, while Manders was second with 77, 10—67.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood pro, was second to Cox in the pro sweeps with a 37, 33—70. Second place team in the pro-amateur was Cliff Spencer, East Potomac, and Perry Patteson, with a 63. Spencer had 72 and Patteson 78, plus seven handicap strokes.

Passeau Beats Giants, 1 to 0, For Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—The Cubs, after losing three straight games by one-run margins, saw the scales finally tilt in their favor today as they beat the New York Giants, 1 to 0, behind the brilliant three-hit pitching of Claude Passeau.

The only run of the game came in the first inning, when lead-off man Stan Hack singled off Hal Shumacher and scored on Bill Nicholson's double. Thereafter both pitchers were invincible, with Schumacher allowing only two more hits before he yielded to a pinch hitter in the eighth. It was Passeau's seventh victory of the season.

Fivesome Gets 15 Birdies, Eagle At Columbia

Fifteen birdies and an eagle for a fivesome in 18 holes.

That sub-par shotmaking speaks for itself as one for the record books. The fivesome was composed of four Columbia members, Ray Swearingen, Craig McKee, Gene Krewson, Ed Fehrle and Stanley Collinge, assistant pro and caddy master.

Swearingen was the star with seven birdies and he also added seven bogeys and four pars for a round of 70. He holed a shot out of a trap on the eighth hole, rolled one in from the edge of the green on 17 and dropped four 20-foot putts and one short one.

Collinge had three birdies and he dropped a 10-foot putt for an eagle on the twelfth hole. Krewson accounted for three birdies, Fehrle and McKee one each. They had a best-ball 58, all missing par on the fourth hole.

Reds Banagan, assistant pro and matchmaker, paired them up, Collinge and Fehrle, with 2 up, against the other three. In the nassau and team birdies, they split even.

Buddy Knox Wins

Newark, N. J., June 23 (AP).—Buddy Knox, 190, of Dayton, Ohio, got up from an eight-count knockdown to take a decison over Wallace Cross, 202, of East Orange, tonight in a 10-round boxing bout.

Brookland Women's Pin Team Scores

A quintet of Brookland Recreation girl bowlers combined with the Weather Man to take some of the starch out of Mildred Peacock's Silver Spring All-Stars, winning a close match by the score of 1,573 to 1,566. Lois Gladding had highs of 129-347 for the winners and was aided by Vickie Croggon's 338 and Ruth King's 324. Dependable "Boots" Pettit was tops for the losers, but her 131 single and 339 set were of no avail. Evelyn Gay's 328 was next high for the All-Stars with Rena Ridenour coming next with 307. The Silver Spring girls, however, snatched some of the glory when they won the doubles match, the duo of Evelyn Gay-Mildred Peacock counting 632 to but 622 for the twosome of Lois Gladding and Ruth King.

ANACOSTIA

The Sterling Laundry boys in the Commercial "D" League at Anacostia Spillway cleaned up the Diamond Cab lads in three straight with Brooks' 126-364 the best punch. Costello, Community Barber Shop, had top single for the night of 138 while C. Peterson's 385 for Absher Construction led for set. D. Knott and M. Welch had 342s to spark a two-game win by Frazier Coal over J. J. Taylor.

ARLINGTON—

TAKOMA

Frances Wilson and Dick Gibson ruled the Takoma Recreation Mixed Doubles League last night with a 754 count with the latter leading the men with highs of 147-386. Evelyn Gay and George Leatherly won all three for Mr. and Mrs. Bingham and Ruth Dennis and Jack Horner treated Bill and Ella Bowman in the same manner. Hap and Blanche Newman, the former the Takoma Recreation manager, took the odd game from the Jack Cains.

The Club "D" League at Anacostia Spillway found Janis, Orioles and Andrews, of the team bearing his name, the leaders with counts of 135 and 361, respectively, with the former's totals aiding in winning team highs of 556 and 1,622.

York Hollingsworth Scores Hole-in-One

Hollingsworth, a District banker, was playing with his brother, Don, John Miller and Neal McKinney.

In putting the Yanks over the Indians, Doyle, the veteran Broadway betting commissioner who has been watching big league baseball for 50 years, says "Cleveland is leading the league now, but it isn't the winning type of ball club. If the Yanks press them very much longer, Cleveland probably will blow wide open. They're the kind of club that just couldn't win the pennant by a game or two. The Indians will need about a ten-game margin to win. They're not a first-class ball club. They blow decisions to fourth rate teams—a thing a fine ball club never will do.

CONSIDINE

"I have an idea, too, that Feller's draft number will come up in August and that sentiment throughout the country will be so strongly opposed to a deferment for a $30,000-a-year ball player with no dependents, that he will be put in uniform pronto.

"As for the National League, I don't see how the Cards can lose. "As for the National League, I don't see how the Cards can lose, good a pitching staff as there is in baseball, plus more three hundred hitters than you'll find in the hall of fame. They are the first odds-on choice I've named this year. In my book, the Dodgers just don't have enough punch to win. The Reds will make a good stab at the pennant before they're through, but they're too far behind."

After Joe DiMaggio homered and doubled Sunday to prolong his batting streak to 35 straight games, and enable the Yanks to break the Tigers' old record for the number of consecutive games in which a team has hit at least one home run, we dropped down into the Yankee locker room to talk to him. We found him almost indifferent to his present batting streak, but all in favor of talking about the one he set in the Pacific Coast League during his first year in organized baseball—1933. He hit in 61 straight games that year.

That 1933 streak nearly ended in the 43rd game. Tom Sheehan, a great old Coast League pitcher, was pitching his Hollywood team to a 12-1 victory over DiMaggio's San Francisco Club. Joe was hitless when he came up to bat with two outs and none on in the ninth. What happened is one of the sharpest memories in the memory-filled life of DiMagio. Sheehan was out to make Joe earn his hit, and, after a bitter duel, Joe finally did. He had the coolness to let a beautiful curve go past him, with two strikes on him, and it barely missed the corner of the dish. Then he hit Sheehan's best fast ball against the fence.

"Young Ed Walsh ended my streak," Joe told us, as he sat there wringing wet on a stool in front of his Yankee locker. "Funny thing, too, the way it turned out. I had been hitting third in the batting order, but this day Jim Cavney, the manager, moved me up to first to give me more times at bat. Well, I never got close to a hit off Walsh. But I came up with one out in the ninth, the score tied and a man on third, and I hit a long fly that scored the man from third and won the ball game for us. If I had struck out the game would have gone into extra innings and maybe I'd have gotten another rap. Funny, eh?—winning the game and blowing your streak at the same time."

During the 61-game streak, DiMaggio told us, he several times had to reach across the plate and smack bad balls to keep from having his streak broken by a pitcher who was trying to walk him. "So far nobody's tried to walk me in this new streak," Joe said, "Honestly, I wouldn't care if they did walk me, and the streak ended, if the walk helped us win a game."

Billy Conn Hits Golden Trail

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 23.—Johnny Ray, explosive manager of Billy Conn, headed for New York tonight to put smiling Billy in the movies, the first step in reaping the harvest of gold from Conn's gallant stand against Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Ray said he intended to complete arrangements for Billy's appearance in a movie, "Kid Tinsel," which is expected to net the Pittsburgh Irishman $25,000. Work on the movie will start in Hollywood in a few weeks, Ray said.

An additional $2,000 in bunches of $1,000 each will come into the Conn-Ray treasury this week for Billy's services as a referee of a bout on a Baltimore, Md., card and for the Battling Kid's appearance on the radio in New York.

Two Maryland Title Matches Here Today

Two Maryland State Golf Championships move in on the District today, the women starting a five-day play for the State crown at Chevy Chase while the amateurs under 21 will battle for the junior title at Indian Spring.

More than a score of the entries in the women's championship practiced yesterday morning at Chevy Chase. Today's first round for the field of 86 will be an 18-hole medal test while match play will start Wednesday and continue through the finals Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the defending champion and newly crowned District titlist, is the logical favorite. Baltimore's delegation will not be as strong as usual as Mrs. Jerome Sloman and Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow will not compete.

Junior Tourney Cut

The District will have its usual star performers in addition to Mrs. T. F. Neblett and Mrs. T. O. Brandon, comparative newcomers to local championship golf.

The junior tournament has been cut to 18 holes and will be played this afternoon at Indian Spring. Entries will be accepted on the tee. There will be the usual age class prizes in addition to th championship trophy. Fred Bolton will not defend his title.

The District junior championship will follow tomorrow at Indian Spring, over the 36-hole route. Dr. W. C. Barr will not make pairings, but will accept entries on the tee between 9 and 10 a. m. Bill Cassedy is defending champion. Boys 20 years of age and under are eligible for both events.

Red Burman Flattens Al Hart In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 23.—Clarence (Red) Burnam, 192, of Baltimore, hit the comeback trail tonight by knocking out Al Hart, 222, Washington Negro, midway in the second round of their scheduled ten-round fight.

In another scheduled ten-round bout, Slugger White, 142½, New York Negro, was awarded a technical knockout in the sixth round over Manuel Villa 1st, 144, of Mexico, who was badly cut over the right eye.

The championship will be decided over the Indian Canyon golf course at Spokane, July 14-19, and most sectional qualifying rounds will be held between June 27 and 30. A few already have been held, and the rounds at Kansas City and Omaha have been canceled because of lack of interest.

Leonard vs. Lee As Nats-Chisox Open Series Today

The fourth-place White Sox move into Griffith Stadium today for the start of a three-game series with the Nats, bringing with them Outfielder Taft Wright and First Baseman Joe Kuhel, former Washington favorites.

Manager Bucky Harris will dispatch Dutch Leonard to the mound to oppose the left-handed Thornton Lee. The latter has long been a troublesome pitcher for the Nats.

It was against the White Sox earlier in the month that the Nats brought a 12-game losing streak to an end with two victories out of three games in Chicago.

2-Man Mayhem Returns to Arena

Two-man team competition will be resumed on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena when two wrestlers who were rivals in a bout last week will team together. They are Maurice LaChappelle, the French master, and Ace Freeman, a promising Wisconsin grappler. The LaChappelle-Freeman combination will face the villainous duo of Angelo Leone and Jim Austeri.

Headliners will be Able Coleman, the midget mauler, and Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man, meeting here for the first time. In the semiwindup Lou Plummer, of Baltimore, will tackle Hans Kampfer, the Mighty Oak.

Jockey Kelly Drives Blablah to Victory at Charles Town

Triumphs by Half Length With Drive; Pimlico Lady Takes Down Show Spoils

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 23.—With Jockey Sammy Palumbo stealing some of his thunder of late, Jockey Willie Kelly came through with one of his best rides of the meeting to win the Allen Purse, feature of the Wash Day program here in the mountain country. Kelly, leading rider at the meeting, simply refused to allow O. S. Jennings' Blahblah to stop and pushed her into the finish line a half length in advance of J. E. Hughes' Dashing Doe. Third in the field of eight going the about 3 furlongs was Pimlico Lady, half of the G. G. Waugh, jr., entry.

Blahblah had a scattered backing in the crowd of 6,000 and returned her followers a $9.20 mutuel. The race was one of the fastest of the meeting, the daughter of Economic and Mint Dinah turning in time of 1:15, only two-fifths of a second over the track record held jointly by Red Wrack and Pimlico Lady.

Blahblah Away on Top

Kelly made no mistakes with Blahblah. He had the mare on top in the first jump and steadied her while she opened ground. Dashing Doe and Pimlico Lady were always second and third. Dashing Doe moved up menacingly approaching the stretch and then Kelly went to work in earnest. He put all his skill into the stretch run to keep the mare going. It was well that he did for Danny Scocca did some real scuffling on Dashing Doe. Pimlico Lady weakened in the closing stages.

The customers who claim the combination of 7 and 7 took down the daily double of $22.80. S. H. Hall's Sun Scene started the twin bet with a smashing victory under the guidance of Jockey Buddy Root. Mr. Jim was second and Broomoria was third to the $6.80 shot.

In the second half of the double, the third race, Jockey Bobby Bernhardt put up a strong ride on C. O. Ferguson's Chaska to bring the daughter of Cahlenger II home in front of Goodwine, Fulton B. and five others. Chakra paid $6.40.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The horse Gold Parade died here yesterday. It is believed that the plater might have eaten clover near an orchard where the trees had been sprayed. Henry Clark's fast horse, Mason Dixon, is on the sick list, suffering from a throat ailment. Capt. Ewart Johnston was pleased with Royal Business' victory last Saturday but he was disappointed that he did not see her perform. He was in Baltimore for a wedding—not his own. I was all wet about Jockey Kelly being five winners ahead of Palumbo. The score was: Kelly, 29; Palumbo, 27; going into yesterday's program. Seems as though I lost some friends when I took up for Palumbo during that slump. About that Jean C and Petsamo race which caused quite a beef, I recommend looking up the footnote on that race in The Post's chart. We don't always give Palumbo the best of it. The horse show did O. K. with its four days of racing last week, finishing 24 per cent ahead of last year. Little Norman Hernandez, 3-year-old son of Jockey Butsy Hernandez, was a press-box visitor. He yelled to his father who was on the way to the post, "Like your horse, Daddy?" His father smiled and Norman yelled, pointing to the finish line, "Get back here quick." H. W. Pearson's Kai-Min is just about the distance champion around here among the platters. The 6-year-old won his fifth race of the meeting yesterday. Pretty good for a horse that was supposed to be at the end of his career when sold for a song at an auction here last winter. There were five claims in the box for Randles' Queen yesterday. One was thrown out because it was improperly made out and the other four prospective buyers "shook." Mrs. L. E. Crowell was the lucky one in the draw and took the filly for $800. This is going to be a short lead—Too Hot. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—TERRY MAY is far down the list but will be hard to beat if sent postward in this field. The Donaldson entry of BUSY TIME and VERA M is formidable. HAPPY SLAVE belongs in the thick of contention.

Second race—GAY PRANK has been shopping around for a spot and this looks like the right one. I'm going to string along. NAVIGATION and OF COURSE carry packages of 118 pounds and should fill out the money circle.

Third race—COUNSELLO appears well placed in this event. The distance and the weight appear about right. SETTLER breaks off the rail and may be better than generally rated. CAIDON would be a factor if in action but is a very doubtful starter.

Fourth race—SMALL CHANGE gets my call in this sprint affair. The veteran has been rested and should have the speed. CRUSAND gets in light and is a threat. EMMA H. is good now but may want a longer route.

Fifth race—GLITTER GIRL will have to be caught by this gang. She gets in light and is ready for the question. WELSH STAR turned in a fine effort last out. Feather weight gives IDA TIME a chance.

Sixth race—FLAG ETTA has done about everything asked and gets my backing in this field. RED IDOL never was better and will be right there. SHAILLEEN has closing ability and is dangerous.

Seventh race—WINTONA gets a light assignment and has shown me enough to warrant a top selection here. HAGERSTOWN BOY is the class but may have too much weight. MISS KSAR breaks off the rail and should go well.

Eighth race—ALAMODE should come through in the final eighth to defeat these. Likes the route. SUMMER STOCK and WAR RUMOR to account for the place and show awards.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take BLUE COVERT, SARANITE and SPOUT RUN.

Best bet—ALAMODE

King's Favorite Horse Artist Dies

London, June 23 (AP).—James Lynwood Palmer, 76, celebrated painter of Derby winning horses, died yesterday at his home in Heston.

Although he attended no art school and his works were never shown at any public exhibition, he painted for King George V and many owners of race horses of the century in Britain, the United States, France and Germany.

Hall Battles Bensinger in Junior Tennis Finals Today

David Smith And Helfrith Eliminated

Hall Beats Former To Continue His 'Dark Horsee' Role; Match at Columbia

Bob Hall, the unseeded star who recently moved here from Kansas City, moved within one step of the Junior Division title of the City of Washington Tennis Tourney yesterday at Columbia Country Club when he defeated David Smith, 6—4, 6—2.

Today the young ace faces his biggest battle when he meets Bobby Bensinger, former National Junior titlist in the final. Bensinger yesterday downed Bill Helfrith with the greatest of ease, 6—0, 6—1.

No matter what the outcome of the Hall-Bensinger match, both will have another chance at a trophy later. They will pair in doubles, after a 6—0, 4—6, 6—4 triumph over Charley Hackney and Dave Smith yesterday against Ben Fisher and John Waits for the cup today. The latter duo downed Cotton Smith and Crandall Alford, 6—1, 6—4 in the semifinals.

With the Boys Division idle, other interest in the meet was attached to girls play at Friends School. La Jeanne Echols and Ann Powell started the days activity with a 6—0, 7—5 victory over Amy Weston and Alice Sze in the doubles quarter-finals. That was the end of the Echols-Powell victory string, however, for in an ensuing semifinal the team lost to Margot Parsons and Julie Fisk, 4—6, 6—0, 6—2.

The other entry in today's doubles final will be Ruth Johnsen and Margery Snowden, who had little difficulty turning back Jane Miller and Gwen Groves yesterday, 6—3, 6—2.

Today's Schedule (1:30 P. M.)
Girls' singles—Parsons vs. Fisk (final).
Junior singles—Hall vs. Bensinger (final).
Boys' singles—Schwetzer vs. Sterling (final).
Girls' doubles—Johnsen-Snowden vs. Parsons-Smith (final).
Boys' doubles—Bernard-D. Smith vs. Schafroth-Sterling (final).
Junior doubles—Fisher-Waits vs. Bensinger-Hall (final).

Union Printers Bow to Naval Air

The Union Printers lost their chance to end first-half hostilities in the United States Government Baseball League yesterday when they lost a 10-4 decision to Naval Air Station on the latter's field.

A three-game playoff between the clubs will decide the champion, starting tomorrow on the Ellipse and continuing Friday and Sunday if necessary.

Pitcher Meyers led both the batting and mound efforts of the Air nine yesterday, hurling eight-hit ball and winding up with a triple and single in two official times at bat. Buddy and Sam Webb and Dick Mosedale, of the Printers, were touched for ten hits by the Air men.

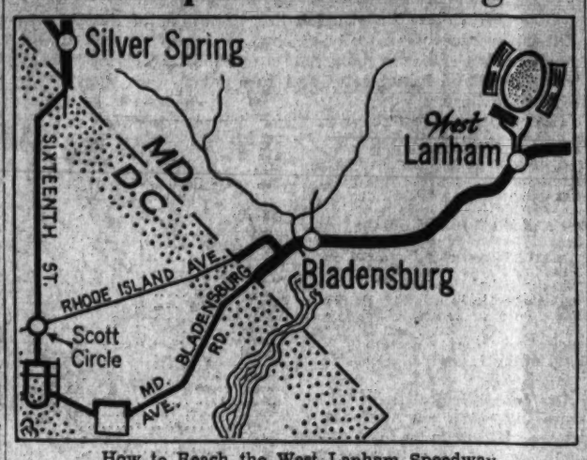
Twice-Postponed Midget Auto Races Hope to Start Tonight



How to Reach the West Lanham Speedway

8-Race Program Opens at West Lanham, Md., At 8:30 P. M.; Crowd of 8,500 Expected

Midget auto racing comes back to Washington tonight—the time is 8:30 o'clock and the place is the new West Lanham (Md.) Raceway, where from 20 to 25 cars square off in competition for $2,000 in prize money.

Every effort will be made to present tonight's twice-postponed, 8-race schedule on schedule, and no decision will be made prior to 6 o'clock this afternoon in the event of a postponement. Should another postponement be unavoidable, the card goes on at West Lanham Saturday night.

The new speedway, considered one of the finest in America by Racing Director Walter Stebbins, is located 4 miles from the Peace Cross at Bladensburg, Md., and along the Defense Highway. The Peace Cross may be reached by driving out either Maryland or New York Avenue.

Adding to the thrills of tonight's inaugural card will be the unveiling of the only steeply banked track in the United States. The West Lanhah raceway is banked to height of 17 feet on the turns and 4 feet on the straightaways and has been constructed within the past several weeks at a cash expenditure of $6,000.

8,500 Expected

The stadium's seating capacity of 8,500 persons probably will be filled to overflowing, and a lighting system that transmits 79,000 watts will illuminate the quarter-mile macadamized track. A public address system manned by an experienced midget racing commentator will keep the spectators informed on the progress of the races, and free parking space for 5,000 automobiles will be available on the grounds.

Bill Schindler, the one-legged midget driving favorite who won a huge following at the old Capital Speedway locally two years ago, will be included in tonight's starting field as will Rex Records, Wild Bill Holmes and Mike Joseph, who also scored in appearances here back in 1939.

Gesell Favorite

Ernie Gessell, current leader of Eastern midget racing and a three-time winner in major competition last week, probably will rule the prerace favorite. His supremacy will be challenged, however, by a star-spangled field that includes such competitors as Ted Tappett, Lyle Dickey, Len Dunkan, Andy DeVercelli, Frank Bebee, Bill Troutwine and Walt Walker.

Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, and his party will be guests of honor at trackside, while a Congressional representation and legislators from the State of Maryland also will be seated at trackside.

Tickets for tonight's races are available at the Standard Capitol Servicenter, between Second and Third Streets, on Constitution Avenue Northwest, and at the Sport Center. They are priced at 55 cents, 75 cents and $1.10.

Davis, Kent Spring Upsets At Haverford

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., June 23.—Unseeded Joe Davis, of Vanderbilt, and Marvin Kent, of Lehigh, two players who have been standouts in their districts for sometime, gained national attention today with upset victories in the opening round of the National Intercollegiate Tennis Tourney at the Merion Cricket Club.

Davis bowled over third-seeded Billy Reedy, of Southern California, 6—3, 6—2, while Kent, who as Marvin Kantrowitz won the Middle Atlantic indoor title a year ago, disposed of fifth-seeded Za nCarver, of North California, 3—6, 6—4, 6—1.

David Freeman, of Pomona, sprang a third upset by beating fourth-seeded Seymour Greenberg, of Northwestern, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4, in the second round.

Davis and Kent followed up their first round upsets by beating Allen Parks, of Notre Dame, and Sterling Lord, of Grinnell, in the second round. Davis won over Parks 5—7, 6—2, 6—1, while Kent downed Lard, 6—2, 6—2.

Washingtonian Loses.

Other favorites remained in the running, although Joe Hunt, of Navy, and Ted Olewine, of Southern California, ranked first and second, had their first round matches delayed until tomorrow. They were not able to arrive in time from Chicago.

Warren Christner, of Texas, ranked sixth, won over Merwin Miller, of Washington, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2, while eighth seeded Richard McKee of Miami (Fla.) University reached the third round. He beat William Gifford, of Cornell, 6—4, 7—5, and Dan Canale, of Notre Dame, 0—6, 6—0, 6—1.

Seventh seeded William Gillespie, of Miami (Fla.) University, also reached the third round along with Bill Canning, of California, a quarter-finalist last year; and Frank Mehner, of Utah; Elston Wyatt, of Navy; Calvin Sawyer, of Chicago; and George Toley and Charles Mattman, both of Southern California.

O'Donnell's Wins, 6 to 4, Over Reliance

Paced by three successive singles by Outfielder Durkin, O'Donnell's Sea Grill nine yesterday opened its second-round Post-Industrial League schedule with a 6-4 triumph over Reliance Insurance in a six-inning game on the Ellipse.

On the short end of a 4-1 count going into the fifth, the Grillmen decided the contest when they staged a four-run rally, involving four hits and two Reliance errors. Liggett and Helmer issued the losers only six hits, while their mates slammed Giller for nine.

Montgomery To Workout Here in Public

Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia's "second Henry Armstrong," will report here Thursday for a public workout before his Monday night ten-round date with Wishy Jones in Griffith Stadium.

Promoter Joe Turner said yesterday the recent conqueror of Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins may report tomorrow but that it is certain he'll be here Thursday to train at the Fourteenth and W Streets arena.

Jones, managed by Eddie Walker and a stablemate of Chalky Wright, also will report this week.

Phil Furr, the veteran Washington welterweight, was given a clean slate yesterday by the District Boxing Commission and will fight Al Franklin, local colored ace, in a co-feature Monday. Furr had been accused of running out on a New Jersey engagement, but after hearing his story, the commission agreed to permit him to fight here. Montgomery will be guest of honor Friday night at a dinner given by Philadelphia sports writers.

Rain Postpones Softball Twin Bill

Rain forced the postponement of last night's double-header softball attraction at Washington Softball Stadium, in which Fat Boy and Yellow Cab, and D. C. Firemen and U. S. Aggies were scheduled to meet. It was the third straight postponement of games for the Fire ten.

In yesterday afternoon's battle Fat Boy won its third straight Sherwood League engagement by beating May Hardware, 6-1.

Griffith Made $40,000 Offer To Wakefield

telegram that day, and I did. I also offered to pay him $1,000 a month for the remainder of the playing season. I presumed that would bring him to the Washington team, and I had planned the announcement for last Sunday morning."

Griffith declared that despite his willingness to pay $40,000 for an untried rookie who had never played anything but college ball, he was unable to compete with as wealthy a club owner as Walter O. Briggs, automobile body manufacturing tycoon, who owns the Tigers.

"These rich men make it impossible for other club owners to compete for talent," said Griffith. "I was willing to gamble more than I had ever paid for a rookie like that in my life, but the Tigers stepped in and went far over my head.

"But I want Washington fans to know that I tried to keep faith with them."

Wakefield, an outfielder who batted .380 in 22 games for Michigan this season, hitting nine home runs, is expected to join the Buffalo or Beaumont teams in the Tiger farm system. Griffith had intended to display him immediate in a Washington uniform. POVICH.

Civil Service Ten Upsets Kavakos, 2-0

Civil Service softballers upset Kavakos Grill, 2-0, in a Sherwood Twilight League game yesterday at the Sherwood Playground. Joe Martz hurled four-hit ball for the winners, whose plate work was paced by George King's homer and single in four trips.

Toast of the Sandlots...

Just across the Potomac sandlot baseball circles are feeling sorry for the Arlington Dodgers, of the Washington-Virginia League. They are the hard luck club of the circuit, losing more games than they care to mention in the last three innings, on bad hops, etc. Nobody need be sorry for Billy Hawes, though.

The scrappy 22-year-old catcher of the Dodgers is doing quite well, if his team isn't. He's hitting above the .300 mark—as he's done since he started playing at the tender age of 14—and he's still handling the Dodgers' short-handed mound staff with his usual brilliance.

Because he has played with Hymie Inscoe longest, Billy says he'd rather catch him than any other Dodger hurler. He doesn't care who does the pitching, however, as long as they give him a glove for his left hand. A right hand thrower, Billy bats from the port side of the plate.

A product of Oakton (Va.) High, Billy also qualifies in the athletic field as a basketball player. He's only 5 foot 9 and weighs only 150. His size hasn't handicapped him in either the court game or baseball.

Whether the Dodgers ever win a crown or not, the Hawes family—Billy and his wife—will always boast a member of a championship team. That will be Mrs. Billy, who was Shortstop Josephine Leach, of the Arlington Aces girls' softball team, when it won the city title last year.—BILL BURNETT.

Quarterback Star Signs With 'Skins

Elmer Lee Gentry, quarterback of the University of Tulsa football team, is the latest Redskin draftee to come to terms for the coming campaign.

Gentry, who stands 6 feet and weighs 195 pounds, is the twelfth of 20 draftees signed. He is 22 years old and was one of the outstanding performers in the East-West All Star Shrine game in San Francisco on January 1, when he was quarterback of the Western eleven.

In 1939 Gentry was an exceptional ball carrier, but last season with other ball carriers coming along he was shifted to the inside blocking back post and there too turned in a steady performance.

With the signing of Gentry the Redskins now have 34 players in tow.

Titcomb Beats Arlington Nine For GAO, 2-1

Jim Titcomb, General Accounting Office pitcher, pulled out of a disastrous spot in the ninth inning yesterday to save a 2-to-1 margin for the Accountants over the Arlington Dodgers, in the Departmental League.

With G. A. O. leading by its eventual edge, Pat Murphy, the Macs' rightfielder, smashed a triple to start the last frame. In quick succession, however, the next three batters were retired as Titcomb hurled masterfully.

The winners' deciding run came in the sixth stanza, when Les Hoff tripled Hudson home.

Arnovich is expected to report for service with the next selection of draftees July 22.

Loans of D. C. Banks Exceed $101,000,000

Nineteen banks in the District of Columbia made 39,667 loans totaling $101,631,382 to business firms and individuals during the second half of 1940, according to the semiannual survey of the American Bankers Association.

43,300 new loans totaling.. $49,439,314
48,276 renewals of loans totaling 44,128,313
1,031 new mortgage loans totaling 8,063,755
39,667 loans totaling.....$101,631,382

The survey showed that business firms in the District used less than half of the "confirmed open lines of credit" offered to and kept available for regular borrowers for use as needed by them. Of this amount $11,677,075 or 47.5 per cent was used.

The average number of new loans made per bank during the six months period under review was 2,282 and the average size of loan was $1,140. The average number of loans renewed per bank was 2,383, and the average renewal was $975.

The average number of new mortgage loans made per bank was 54, and the average new mortgage made was for $7,821.

Meanwhile the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities were $1,405,000,000 larger than a year ago.

These loans increased $28,000,000 to a total of $5,792,000,000 in the week ended June 18. The defense program has been a primary factor in the expansion.

Of the total, $300,000,000 will be sold for cash in order to provide funds for the defense lending and purchasing activities of the RFC and its subsidiaries, and $211,000,000 will be issued in exchange for an equal amount of maturing RFC notes.

Commodity Prices Spurt in Lively Buying; War News Outweighs Threat of SEC Policing

Speculation Studied

By the Associated Press

Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced yesterday that the Securities Commission would undertake constant observation of unregulated commodity markets to help prevent "undue speculative activity"

Unregulated commodities include tin, lead, zinc, copper, silk hides, rubber, pepper, cocoa, coffee, and sugar. Speculation occurs in futures trading.

Under the arrangement the SEC will make daily or possibly hourly reports to Henderson on market activity. Any action to control prices would be up to Henderson himself, it was said.

Henderson wrote the commision on June 5 that his office had been "disturbed" by the amount of speculative activity in essential foodstuffs in some of the unregulated exchanges. He said that some control steps, such as increasing margin requirements and tightening various trading practices, already had been taken.

"It is my feeling," Henderson wrote, "that in this emergency period there is need for a close watch of the trading in these markets to the end that the public is not victimized by undue speculative activity."

He said that if the SEC would undertake the job it would prevent the necessity of building up a staff for that purpose in the price control office.

Chairman Edward C. Eicher of the SEC wrote Henderson on June 17 that the SEC would be able to make the "additional scrutiny of the unregulated commodities markets."

"You understand, of course, that we do not have statutory power to proceed against persons who manipulate the prices of these commodities or who speculate excessively to the detriment of the public. We shall, however, use our facilities to detect such occurrences and call them immediately to your attention."

Speculators Undaunted

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—Spurred by expectations of war demand, commodity prices shot higher today and held gains in better shape than did securities prices.

Some reached the highest levels in 11 years, and while realizing cut the bulge in many, others closed around their tops.

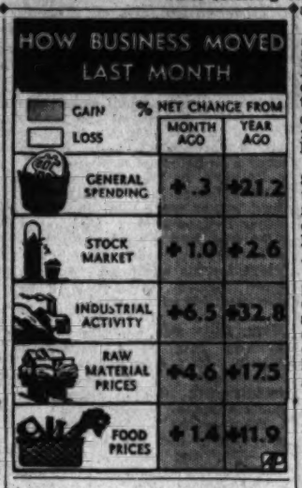
The Russian-German hostilities apparently outweighed the warnings of Price Administrator Leon Henderson in traders' minds. Henderson today announced the Securities Commission would keep an eye on unregulated commodity markets for him, and report untoward speculation.

Cotton closed strong, up from $1.65 to $2 a bale. All futures topped 15 cents a pound for the first time since 1930. Cottonseed oil moved swiftly forward early but lost some of its gain to end .30 to .61 of a cent higher.

Wool tops were 1.2 to 1.8 cents a pound higher and hides .15 to .21 cents a pound higher. Domestic sugar futures ranged .01 to .05 of a cent a pound lower but the world contract price ranged .04 to .06 cent higher. Cocoa dropped .15 to .17 of a cent a pound.

Rubber trading was suspended for the day while the New York Commodity Exchange considered the effect of the Federal assumption of all rubber imports other than contracts made prior to June 23.

The Associated Press index of 35 important wholesale staple commodities rose to 88.76, highest since August, 1937, and compared with 88.08 Saturday.



Grain Prices Soar on Soviet Entry Into War

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—Grain prices soared today as traders tried to evaluate economic and political aspects of the war between Germany and Russia, which apparently will involve at least part of the latter's huge cereal-producing resources.

Wheat, of which Russia is the world's principal producer, soared as much as 4⅛ cents at the opening bell, July to $1.04½, December to $1.09. These were the highest prices since May last year and were only a few cents below the best levels since 1937.

Corn ran up as much as 3¾ cents at the start and soybeans almost 7 cents. Corn, oats, beans and lard futures were the highest in four years.

Despite heavy profit taking, which pared gains sharply at times, wheat closed 2½@2⅞ cents higher than Saturday; July, $1.04@$1.03⅞; September, $1.05¾@$1.05⅝; corn, ⅝@⅞ up; July, 74⅛@78¼; September, 76⅞@77; oats, ⅝@⅞ higher; soybeans, 5⅛@6¾ higher; rye, ⅝@1 up, and lard, 27@33 higher.

Grain men expressed belief early wheat buying was based largely on bullish interpretation of the new turn of events with respect to the war as a whole. Later, however, important implications, such as possibility of destruction of crops and impairment of harvest operations in Russian wheat territory, were recognized.

Soybeans were the only commodity in active trade here to hold full early gains. Beans, in fact, extended the advance before the close, due to outstanding strength of cottonseed oil, which was the highest in 15 years, and lard, which reflected four-year hog price peaks.

Limited Rubber Trade to Resume

New York, June 23 (AP).—After a day's suspension of trading in rubber futures as new Government regulations concerning the commodity were studied, governors of the Commodity Exchange, Inc., voted today to resume trading tomorrow to liquidate open positions.

The governors' action prohibited the opening of new positions. Rules were also amended to make the permissable fluctuation in any day's trading ¼ cent a pound, instead of 2 cents, as formerly.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

At the request of the Treasury Department, The Washington Post starts today a new feature answering commonly asked questions about the defense savings program. The first instalment follows:

Q—What is a U. S. Defense Savings Bond?

A—This bond is proof that you have loaned money to the United States Government for national defense. Your bond bears interest at the rate of 2.9 per cent a year, if held to maturity (ten years).

Q—Why should I buy Defense Bonds?

A—Because money talks. To dictators it speaks defiance. To friends of freedom it says, "Here's my hand!"

Note—To purchase Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest postoffice or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington.

Rail Issue Sought

The Illinois Central Railroad asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to sell $6,920,000 in equipment trust certificates. Proceeds would be used to purchase 2,400 freight cars.

Pipeline Need Challenged by Rail Labor

By the Associated Press

Legislation designed to facilitate construction of petroleum pipe lines was opposed yesterday before a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee.

J. G. Luhrsen, spokesman for the Railway Labor Executives Association, challenged the need for pipelines in the Southeast. He declared no substantial evidence had been submitted to support the Administration's view that the proposed pipe line from Louisiana to North Carolina and the Southeastern line from Florida to Tennessee were important to the national defense.

"The hearings before the House Committee clearly indicated that when originally contemplated, these lines had no relation to the national defense program," Luhrsen told the Senate group. "It was only when the pipe line backers found that the opposition was so strong that they began supporting it as a national defense project."

The measure under consideration of the committee, already passed by the House after Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes had indorsed it, would permit the Government to acquire rights-of-way by purchase or exercise of the right of eminent domain if the President deemed construction of a pipe line necessary to the national defense.

"We wholeheartedly approve of the national defense program," Luhrsen added. "But so far they have failed to submit to a Congressional committee facts to support the contention that pipe lines are truly needed in the interest of defense."

Luhrsen estimated that there were at least 20,000 unused tank cars in the country now.

W. L. Stanley, vice president of the Seaboard Airline Railroad, testified that construction of the proposed lines in the Southeast would cause a layoff of 1,000 railway employes.

He urged that the committee consider the long range future needs of the country studying the measure. Once the present emergency was over railways would be facing competition originated under abnormal conditions, he said, observing that rail carriers were able to transport all kinds of commodities while pipe lines could serve only limited needs.

Skeptics Cash Profits After Stocks Sprint 1 to 4 Points; Initial Gains Cut Measurably

New York, June 23.—Bullish interpretations of the German-Russian war outbreak today touched off one of the fastest early stock market rallies in more than a year but the sprint soon lost momentum and initial gains of 1 to 4 points were substantially cut at the close.

Heavy buying orders at the start—blocks of 1,000 to 7,0000 shares changed hands—were said to have been based on the theory that the Hitler smash at Stalin would give the democracies a "breathing spell" and enable the British to wind up for a successful attack on the Nazis. In addition, most thought that market had reahed a "sold out" condition and was ready for recovery on any optimistic signal.

The skepticaly minded, however, began to cash in before midday to await tangible evidence that the Bolsheviks could withstand the blast of the Fuehrer's legions.

Dealings dwindled from 350,000 shares in the first hour to 100,000 in the second, 90,000 in the third, 70,000 in the fourth and a total for the full proceeding of 754,140 shares. This was the largest turnover since June 10 and compared with 356,070 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a net advance of .4 of a point at 41.8. It also was the best day's gain since June 10.

Some inspiration was found in the business picture which included an upturn in this week's estimated steel mill production to its recent record high of 99.9 per cent of capacity.

In the stock division new year's highs were posted for Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Corporation, Western Union and Savage Arms. Prominent on the upside were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda, American Telephone, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Santa Fe, Du Pont, J. I. Case, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical. Near the close a block of 21,300 shares of Commonwealth & Southern came out at ⅝, off 1-16 of a point.

Among Curb gainers or fractions to a point or so were Brewster Aero, Bell Aircraft, Gulf Oil, Sherwin Williams, American Cyanamid "B," New Jersey Zinc and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore. The turnover here was around 92,000 shares versus 67,000 in the previous full session.

It was a day of rising prices in all sections of the bond market. The Associated Press average of ten foreign issues attained a new 1941 high at 46.6, up .2 of a point, largely as a result of advances of 1 to 2 points in obligations of Norway, Japan and some of the South American countries. British Empire issues slanted upward, but there was little activity in German bonds.

Volume expanded to $8,364,900, par value, the best since May 12, and compared with $5,969,800 last Friday.

Low-priced bonds of the Missouri Pacific were heavily traded following court authorization to pay the semiannual interest on two issues of the system's subsidiaries. The 5s of '77 rose around a point at one time but lost all the advantage in later dealings and ended down ¼, at 25¾, on turnover of $582,000, par value. The 5s of '65 added 5 points net at 26, and the 5s of '81 closed down ½, at 25¾, after having been up most of the day.

United States Governments advanced 1-32 to 17-32 of a point on the stock exchange in light dealings. The trend continued firm over the counter, where quotations averaged 3-32 of a point above Saturday's finals.

6 Brick Firms Charged With Price-Fixing

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 23. — Federal indictments charging conspiracy to violate the antitrust law were returned today against six firms which investigators estimated furnish three-fourths of the fire brick needed to line the Nation's armament-making steel furnaces.

The indictments climaxed a two-week investigation directed by the antitrust division of the Department of Justice.

Five operating companies are accused of each having a director on the board of the American Refractories Institute, of Pittsburgh, and through this set-up are asserted to have conspired "to fix uniform, arbitrary and noncompetitive prices."

Indicted in addition to the institute were General Refractories, of Philadelphia; its president, Floyd L. Greene, and vice president, Drew M. Thorpe; Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. Pittsburgh, its president, Raymond Willey, and vice president W. B. Coullis; A. P. Green Fire Brick Co., Mexico, Mo., and vice president, H. B. Plunkett; North American Refractories Co., Cleveland, and sales manager, H. H. Hopwood; Laclede-Christy Clay Products Co., of St. Louis, and W. J. Westphalen, of St. Louis, president of the institute.

Stocks in Tokyo Plunge; Shanghai Market Booms

Tokyo, June 23 (AP).—The outbreak of war between Germany and Soviet Russia unsettled the Tokyo Stock Market today and many issues declined from 1 to 3 yen.

N. Y. K. Line shipping stock dropped about 2 yen and other shipping issues also were hard hit.

Boom in Shanghai

Shanghai, June 23 (AP).—Shanghai's stock market boomed today in a move traders laid to a general feeling that Great Britain's war chances were greatly improved and the situation in the Pacific definitely eased by Russian-German hostilities.

Stock buying orders were strong and sellers generally were reluctant to dispose of holdings, especially where British or American interests were concerned.

Contract Bridge

A doubling situation, handled deftly, is shown in today's box. Self-confidence is the keynote, for declarer stepped right into three no trump, though he held only one of his partner's bid suit.

Seymour Kaplan, Manhattan top score winner, sat South, and when he saw he could not establish dummy's long suit, he quickly shifted to a plan of developing his own tricks.

The bidding:

Opening lead: 3 ◇.

Needing another entry to dummy to lead hearts twice toward his hand, he tricked West into letting him win the diamond nine on the second round of the suit by taking West's opening lead with the ace. The unnecessary play of the ace made West think his partner held the queen.

The fourth best diamond was opened; small was played from dummy; East's jack went up and without hesitation Kaplan took the trick with the ace. A low diamond was immediately played toward dummy's nine; West swallowed the bait and ducked, thinking his partner would take the trick. The nine held and Kaplan had his needed entry to dummy.

A low heart went to his queen, East following low, and the diamond queen coaxed out West's reluctant king. A spade was returned; the jack was played from dummy and East took with the ace, playing back another spade to declarer's queen. Now the board was entered with the club ace, the king was taken and another heart played toward the closed hand. It made do difference whether East hopped in with his ace or not; all he could take was the club queen, which, with the heart ace, spade ace and diamond king made only four losers for the declarer. Kaplan nicked up his contract with two hearts, two spades, three diamonds and two clubs.

Listen! with Glynn

Lovers of fine music get a chance to hear some more of it over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight at 8:30, when the Lewisohn Stadium Concerts begin again for the summer.

Alexander Smallens will be conducting the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, and highlights of the first concert will be Smetana's lively "Bartered Bride" overture and a new work, "The Incredible Flutist," by the American composer, Walter Piston.

It may be a curious historical note that the now famed Stadium Concerts were started as an experiment during the first World War, to entertain soldiers and sailors on leave. And now, as then, men in the uniforms of the Nation's fighting forces are being admitteld to them free every Saturday and Sunday night.

CBS has been broadcasting the concerts every summer since 1937 under arrangement with the Philharmonic-Symphony, whose winter concerts from Carnegie Hall have been an exclusive privilege for CBS listeners for the past 11 years.

In addition to broadcasting the Tuesday night concerts throughout the United States, CBS also is sending the programs to South America, via its international short wave station WCBX.

The concerts are to run for at least seven weeks with noted guest conductors alternating at the baton.

OPM Power Consultant Quits To Comply With New Policy

In accordance with an OPM policy adopted last week against permitting paid trade association officials to hold defense jobs, the OPM's power consultant, C. W. Kellogg, announced his resignation yesterday.

Kellogg, who is president of the Edison Electric Institute, trade organization of the utility industry, was recently under fire of Interior Secretary Ickes for having declared at an institute conference that forecasts of power shortages were "unwarranted."

Kellogg's views were immediately disavowed in a formal public statement of OPM.

Others expected to be affected by the OPM policy were Charles W. Boyce, an OPM consultant on pulp and paper, who is also an official of the industry's trade association; William G. Finger, a consultant on rubber, who is an officer of the Rubber Manufacturers Association, and Walter S. Tower, of the American Iron & Steel Institute.

OPM spokesmen explained that the policy was directed against permitting paid industry representatives to act as Government officials concerned with the same industry. They emphasized that the individuals affected would have the alternative of resigning their OPM jobs or their paid trade association positions.

Also announced yesterday was the resignation of Samuel R. Fuller, jr., chief of the materials branch of the OPM production division. Fuller's resignation, which is to permit him to return to his post as president of the North American Rayon Corporation, is in no way connected with the new trade association policy.

Kellogg's duties as power consultant are expected to be performed by J. A. Krug, power manager of the Tennessee Valley Authority, who has recently been loaned to the OPM for work in connection with power problems arising from the expansion of aluminum and magnesium production.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Dairy Union Gets Contract With Pay Rise

The Milk and Dairy Employes' Local 246, A. F. of L., yesterday successfully concluded several months of negotiatons with Washington area dairies and signed a new contract granting pay raises and shorter hours, it was announced.

The negotiations threatened at times to end in a strike of nearly 1,200 employes employed in 12 Washington dairy companies.

The new agreement provides for an increase of from $2.50 to $4 per week for all members of the union with a reduction of two hours a week for wholesale and retail drivers and three hours for special delivery drivers; it was said.

The contract also guarantees a closed shop, seniority and general improvement in working conditions, a union spokesman said. For the next 60 days members of wholesale and retail departments shall receive time and a half for all time in excess of 54 hours a week if required to work by the employer, it was said, while female employes who have been receiving $16 per week for 40 hours' work will hereafter receive $23 per week for the same time.

The union's committee was headed by Eugene R. Hubbard, who was assisted by David Walker and Thomas P. O'Brien. All Washington dairies except the Highland Farms dairy will be affected by the new contract, it was said.

Companies involved are Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Embassy Fairfax, Richfield, Wakefield, Lucerne, Alexandria, Arlington County, Hazel, Model Farms, Holbrook, Harvey and Thompson's.

Bookniga Corp. Propaganda Charge Denied

Raphael Rush, vice president of Bookniga Corporation, indicted with two other officials of the company on charges they failed to register with the State Department as foreign agents, testified yesterday the company was a legitimate agency and was not used for propaganda purposes.

On trial before a jury in the District Criminal Court of Justice F. Dickinson Letts with Rush are Morris Liskin, president of Bookniga, and Norman Weinberg, secretary-treasurer. Rush and Weinberg also are charged with conspiracy. Liskin previously pleaded guilty to the charge of failure to register and is on trial only on th econspiracy charge.

Rush told the jury how he became interested in the Bookniga Corporation, stating that he was an American citizen who was an employe of the National Public Bank Co., of New York City from 1919 to 1933. He said he lost his job in the depression and, after employment in the Amtorg Trading Corporation, entered the book-selling trade.

Rush said he had known Liskin for "15 to 18 years." He described for the jury the formation of the company which he maintained was for legitimate business and not for propaganda purposes. His statements were brought out by his attorney, Isadore Englander, of New York.

Leo A. Rover, attorney for Weinberg, placed on the witness stanl in behalf of his defendant Rabbi Louis Grossman, of New York, who testified that Weinberg was a regular attendant of his church. John Lynn, controller of the city of Mount Vernon, N. Y., also testified in behalf of Weinberg's good reputation.

Gallery to Show 22 Chester Dale Collection Works

Twenty-two important paintings from the Chester Dale Collection in New York have been loaned to the National Gallery of Art and will be placed on exhibition early in the French school during the entire autumn, it was announced yesterday.

A list of the paintings, which are of the French nineteenth century school, will be announced later. They cover the development of the nineteenth century from the classical period through the impressionist and post-impressionist painters at the end of the century.

These paintings are in addition to those loaned to the gallery at the time of its opening by Dale. The collection as a whole, formed over two decades by Mr. and Mrs. Dale is described as "one of the most famous collections of nineteenth and twentieth century paintings in the world." The collection heretofore has been available to students and connoisseurs who have visited the Dale home in New York.

Three Soldiers Hurt as Train Wrecks Auto

Three soldiers from Fort Meade were injured, one seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a train at a grade crossing near Beltsville, Md., late yesterday afternoon.

Walter H. Cabaniss, Berkeley Green, and Dan Owens, all of Company E, 116th Infantry, Fort Meade, were taken to Walter Reed Hospital by the Branchville rescue squad. Hospital attendants said Cabaniss suffered brain concussion and a possible fracture of the skull. Green and Owens were released after treatment for cuts and bruises.

The accident happened when the soldiers attempted to cross the tracks to get to the Baltimore Boulevard from a Beltsville residential section.

Owens was driving the car, a 1940 coach with Virginia tags, which belonged to an unidentified soldier at Fort Meade. All three of the injured men are from Chase City, Va.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Miller, 26, of Silver Spring, Md., driver of a Greyhound bus which figured in an accident in which two persons were killed June 7 near Muirkirk, Md., was acquitted yesterday in Hyattsville police court on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Inez Monnett, 26, of 1364 F Street Northeast, and Carl Owens, 25, of 1360 F Street Northeast, an engaged Washington couple, burned to death when their car caught fire after being struck by the bus. Miller and a half dozen witnesses testified that the car, traveling in a north bound lane and driven by Owens, turned in front of the bus headed southward. Witnesses said that the driver failed to signal his intention to cross the road.

"I didn't have time to turn or apply my brakes," Miller stated in testifying that he first saw the car when it was 40 feet from him.

The bus also turned over and burned. Twenty-five soldiers from Fort Meade, who were riding in the bus, broke windows and escaped the flames.

The hearing was attended by Joseph Kadens, accident investigator for the Bureau of Motor Carriers, Interstate Commerce Commission.

In Washington, two children were severely hurt by autos. Fifteen-year-old Estelle Smith, of 2108 Franklin Street Northeast, was riding her bicycle in the 3300 block of Twentieth Street Northeast, when she was hit by a car driven by Ira J. Holliday, 36, colored, of 2024 Gales Street Northeast, according to police. She was taken to Sibley Hospital with several broken teeth and head injuries.

Shirley Todd, 6, colored, of 574 M Street Southeast, was felled by an auto near her home. At Gallinger Hospital she was found to have a possible fractured skull. The driver, police said, was Herbert H. Pool, 27, of Fort Washington, Md.

District Youth Entertains 4-H Delegates

Delegates to the 4-H Club's fifteenth annual encampment here were entertained last night by Washington young people at the Agriculture Department auditorium in a program under the direction of Miss Sibyl Baker, District superintendent of Municipal Recreation.

Miss Blanche Hendrickson, of the Southwest Recreation Center, greeted the 127 farm youths and Sam Gwinn, of West Virginia, gave the club's response. Music was supplied by the Chevy Chase Community orchestra.

The Pierce Hall players presented "The Happy Journey," a one-act play by Thornton Wilder, after other local entertainers had offered a short song festival. Theodore T. Golden performed what he called "old and new magic."

Earlier in the day delegates heard Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., speak on the different kinds of food everyone ought to have in his daily diet.

In the afternoon, the youths went to the Marine Barracks at Eighth and I Streets Southeast to take part in their annual coast-to-coast broadcast over the N. B. C. network. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthou, jr., commended the work being done by 4-H members.

John Baker, of the Department of Agriculture, interviewed a number of the delegates who, via radio, told the 1,500,000 4-H Club members whom they represent in this country of their camp life here on the banks of Tidal Basin.

Gordon Quartet Entertains At Coolidge Auditorium

Nicholas Longworth Foundation in the Library of Congress tenders a concert Monday evening to the American Guild of Organists in Coolidge Auditorium. Artists: E. Power Biggs, organist; Jacques Gordon, Samuel Weiss, William Lincer and Fritz Magg (Gordon String Quartet).

Delegates to the second national biennial convention of the American Guild of Organists were guests last evening of the Nicholas Longworth Foundation in the Library of Congress at a concert in Coolidge Auditorium. Attendance was somewhat lessened by inclement weather, but those who paid no need to the thunderstorm were rewarded witn an unusual program performed by the Gordon String Quartet and E. Power Biggs, organist from Cambridge in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Familiar works by Bach and Beethoven were conjoined with some rare Mozart items and a contemporary string quartet by David Van Vactor, of Northwestern University.

BROWN

Few of the auditors had ever heard before and may never hear again, three one-movement sonatas by Mozart for two violins, violoncello and organ. None of these works is of particular significance either in themes or workmanship, but each moves with the grace characteristic of the composer and has melodic charm. One's enjoyment of these sonatas came primarily from their rarity and from the pleasurable quality of the tonal combination.

Mr. Biggs chose his solo numbers from the Bach shelf, playing the G minor fantasia and fugue, his own arrangement of "Sheep May Safely Graze" and the chorale-prelude, "Rejoice Greatly, Beloved Christians." His performance was more technical than colorful, probably because the organ at his disposal is not rich in registrations.

David Van Vactor's first string quartet in C major, composed last year and played from manuscript, proved to be a work of engaging traits. Conservatively modern in harmonic texture, the music has thematic vitality and many structural points of interest. Particularly adroit was the presto movement, which is a scherzo both in mood and in the witty instrumentation. The adagio contains passages of genuine poetic feeling.

The concert closed with Beethoven's great A minor quartet which is ennobled by the eloquent movement expressing his thanksgiving on recovery from illness. Jacques Gordon and his associates played the eloquent music with a full disclosure of its emotionally searching power.
